Unions Extend Strike To All Ports in U. S.; Ocean Liner Tied Up

Federal Inquiry Halted as Seamen Walk Out of Coast Parley.

Crew Leader Asks Help of Roosevelt

145 Ships Now Held in Port; Pickets Seized at Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Sailing of the transatlantic liner S. S. Manhattan, scheduled for Wednesday, was canceled tonight as striking Pacific Coast maritime unions extended their blockade order to all United States ports.

Extra forces of police patroled New York's waterfront as the 2-day-old strike called by rank-and-file members of the International Seamen's Union in sympathy with 37,000 West Coast waterfront workers tied up its first ship in transatlantic trade.

In San Francisco the blockade order affecting Pacific Coast ships wherever they may be, except those outbound from Honolulu for coast ports, was issued after union representatives caused indefinite postponement of a United States Maritime Commission hearing by walking out.

"It is not our intention," the order said, "to tie up the whole world, but it is our intention to get the demands for which we struck."

The number of strike-bound ships along the coast had reached at least 145, with others due for tie-up as they reached ports.

Twenty thousand Pacific Northwest lumber workers were facing layoffs as result of the strike, and sympathy strike action spread rapidly in Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Sailing Is Canceled.

In New York the sailing of the Panama Pacific liner Virginia, due to depart tomorrow for Pacific ports, was canceled and that of the S. S. Madison, scheduled to leave for Norfolk, Va., was postponed.

The seamen's defense committee claimed 133 ships employing more than 7,000 men in Atlantic and Gulf ports had joined the insurgent strike of the International Seamen's Union.

A rush session of the American Shipowners Association branded the strike "outlawed and unauthorized" and declared seamen would be protected against "intimidation and threats."

Joseph Curran, chairman of the powerful "insurgent" group, said his followers aimed at a complete tieup of shipment all along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

J. W. White, crew delegate of the Eastern Steamship liner Robert E. Lee, telegraphed President Roosevelt urging his intervention to effect a settlement of the Pacific Coast strike.

Urge Intervention.

"Crew of steamship Robert E. Lee, now engaged in strike in sympathy with West Coast seamen, recommend your intervention in order to bring about a satisfactory settlement on West Coast to end strike," the telegram read.

The Robert E. Lee is scheduled to sail for Norfolk tomorrow.

In San Francisco, the wholesale grocery industry, through its chairman, Leo Shapiro, protested to the Secretary of the Navy against the Navy obtaining food from strike-bound warehouses.

Assistant Labor Secretary Edward F. McGrady, who vainly tried to

Divorce Planned By Derby Mother If She Is Winner

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Ontario, Nov. 2.—One of the first things the late Charles Vance Millar's money is going to buy, if Mrs. Pauline Clarke has her way, is a divorce.

As soon as Mrs. Clarke gets her one-sixth cut of the $500,000 to which she feels her ten years of baby-bearing entitles her, she said tonight, she's going to get the decree.

Everything from a divorce to the establishment of a fund for another baby derby is on the shopping list of the six women who, by reason of having brought nine babies into the world in ten years, believe themselves joint winners of the lawyer's legacy. The winner or winners are scheduled to be named at a court hearing this month.

The 24-year-old mother's last five children were born after her separation from her husband. All were properly registered, however, and their illegitimacy doesn't bar them under the Millar will.

Since it became apparent that Mrs. Clarke had a good chance to win, friends said her husband has indicated that the embers of his abandoned love have begun to glow anew.

Mrs. Clarke, however, wants that matrimonial chapter closed. Her lack of money has prevented her from seeking a divorce and has been responsible, she feels, for the fact that her last five children are "Clarkes" by courtesy only. She had intended to marry the man who is their father, she said, but could not because her husband would not divorce her.

To Dine With King and Wally

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, thrice-married social leader, who made her debut in Washington, has been invited, along with her husband, to have dinner with King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

King, Mrs. Simpson to Be Hosts To Lionel Atwills Wednesday

Former Louise Cromwell, Who Made Debut Here, and Third Husband to Be Guests at Dinner; She Has Known King's Friend Many Years.

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

London, Nov. 2.—King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson will dine together Wednesday and among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Atwill, of Beverly Hills, Calif., The Post correspondent was authoritatively informed today.

Like Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Atwill has twice been divorced. As Miss Louise Cromwell she made her debut in Washington. Her first husband was Walter B. Brooks, of Baltimore. She divorced him in Paris in 1919 and in 1922 married Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former Army Chief of Staff, now adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth. Before she became the bride of MacArthur, it was rumored she might marry Gen. John J. Pershing.

She divorced Gen. MacArthur in Reno in 1929 and thereafter married Atwill, who, after a successful career on the stage, had gone to Hollywood.

Mrs. Simpson, whose friendship with King Edward is the most exciting royal romance in a century, and Mrs. Atwill have known each other since before the World War, when both lived in Baltimore.

At that time, Mrs. Atwill, as the wife of Walter B. Brooks, occupied a large mansion in Green Spring Valley, one of the show places of

Franco's Force 10 Miles Away; Madrid Is Calm

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Madrid, Nov. 2.—Rebel airplanes bombed Madrid and its suburbs again today, killing several children, while Gen. Francisco Franco's ground troops drove to within 10 miles of the capital.

Three children were killed in the village of Vallecas, about 5 miles southeast of Madrid. Several more—the exact number could not be ascertained immediately—were killed when a bomb struck a schoolhouse in the outskirts of Madrid.

Meanwhile, as the highly mechanized rebel army moved northward civilians evacuated Mostoles, on the Madrid-Talavera highway, and Brunete, object of a rebel drive designed to protect their left flank from possible ruinous loyalist attack.

The semicircle of rebel armies which for two weeks has gradually been closing in on Madrid, is now within 10 miles of the capital at its nearest point. Yet there is no feeling of panic here. Foreign military experts believe that despite the closeness of the rebels, the fall of Madrid is not imminent, as the city may be able to resist attack for some days.

Arms Guard Planned.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 2.—The committee for nonintervention in the Spanish civil war began work tonight on a draft plan to keep watch on shipments from abroad to the strife-torn nation to make sure that arms do not enter Spain.

A sub-committee is preparing the detailed plan, which will be presented to the full committee and then individually to the 27 nations composing it, for their approval.

Portuguese Indignant.

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Francisco Caheiros, Potuguese delegate to the London Spanish nonintervention committee, at today's sub-committee meeting termed Russia's proposed blockade of the Portuguese ports an "insult."

Conservatives Sweep British Town Elections

Same Party Also Triumphs in Wales; Scotch Voting Today.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 2.—Conservatives today won sweeping victories at the expense of the Laborites in the municipal elections in England and Wales.

Labor, which had a majority on 42 of the 372 city and borough councils, in most instances unsuccessfully defended the gains made in 1933.

Conservatives preached a program of retrenchment and economy in their bid for votes.

The elections were held to replace one-third of the membership of the councils. London boroughs were not involved. The London Council retires as a whole every three years and the next election for it will not be until next year.

The elections commonly are regarded as an index to the electors' trend of thought in national politics, although in many contests purely local affairs constituted the prime issues.

Husband Faints As Wife Presents Him With 'Quads'

By the Associated Press.

Senath, Mo., Nov. 2.—Mrs. James Bridges gave birth to quadruplets in a two-room log cabin near here tonight and her share-cropper husband fainted when Dr. F. W. Speidel told him the news.

The children, one boy and three girls, were born from 6:30 p. m. to 8:36. Two of the girls are in serious condition and Dr. Speidel said he was trying to secure a nurse.

Dr. Speidel, 70-year-old physician, estimated weights of the babies at between 2 and 3½ pounds each.

"Two of the children might not live if we cannot treat them under better conditions," he said.

Mrs. Bridges is 35, her husband 44. They have had five children before tonight, but only one, a 4-year-old girl, is living.

Costs of Food In City Show Drop of 2.4%

Meat, Fruit, Vegetables Cheaper; Eggs, Sugar Register Gains.

The retail cost of food throughout the United States declined 1.8 per cent between September 15 and October 13, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced, in a bulletin issued yesterday.

In Washington, the bureau pointed out, the decline was 2.4 per cent on all foods.

Cereals here gained .1 of a per cent, while meats dropped 4.4 per cent. Dairy products fell 1.5 per cent, but the price of eggs jumped 6 per cent.

Largest drop was in fruits and vegetables, where a decrease of 7.1 per cent was recorded. Beverages and chocolates fell .8 per cent, and fats and oils .1 per cent. Sugar and sweets advanced 5 per cent.

The total averaged .1 per cent less than the cost for the corresponding period in 1935.

"The index for October 13 was 82.2, as compared to the 1923-24 level of 100," stated the bulletin.

"This was 3.7 per cent higher than it was for October 8 last year, although costs are now lower than a year ago for all commodity groups except dairy products and fruits and vegetables.

"The food cost level is now 24.9 per cent above costs for October 15, 1932, when the index was 66.3, but compared with October 15, 1929, when the level index was 107.6, they are now 23 per cent lower and every commodity group shows a decline.

Cereals Advance.

"The cost of cereals and bakery products advanced .1 per cent between September 15 and October 13. Ten of the 13 items in the group advanced in price, two decreased and one remained unchanged. The price of flour, which rose .4 per cent, was higher in 23 of the 51 cities and lowe than 9. The average price of white bread showed no change. Price increases in nine cities were offset by decreases in seven other cities. Cornmeal increased .6 per cent, and hominy grits, 2.5 per cent showed the greatest relative changes and the price of each of these items is now higher than at any other reporting period this year.

"The cost of meats declined 2.8 per cent. This decrease resulted from lower prices for 18 of the 21 items in the group and lower costs in 49 of the 51 cities. The largest decreases were for pork, 5.6 per cent, lamb 6.6 per cent, and roasting chickens, 5.4 per cent.

"Dairy products showed a decrease of 2.6 per cent. The price of butter dropped 5 per cent and was lower in 50 of the 51 cities. The average price of fresh milk declined .6 per cent due in large part to decreases of .8 cents per quart in New York City. Lower prices were reported for six other cities. Increases were reported for 13 cities. In Butte there was an advance of 2 cents per quart."

Seasonal Rise.

"Egg prices showed a seasonal rise and registered an average advance of 6.6 per cent. Eggs were higher in all except one of the reporting cities. Egg prices are now a little below the level of a year ago.

"The cost of fruits and vegetables moved downward 5.6 per cent, the result of lower costs for the fresh products in the group. Ten of the 13 fresh items were lower in price. Of the four fresh fruits included in the index, apples and oranges showed price increases and bananas and lemons were lower."

Extortion Suspect Held.

St. Louis, Nov. 2 (AP).—J. C. Newman, chief of the St. Louis office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, disclosed today the arrest of John A. McGhee, colored, 22, and quoted McGhee as saying he had written an extortion letter to Mrs. Earl Guyton, East St. Louis, Ill., society matron. Newman said the letter demanded $200 from Mrs. Guyton and threatened her with death if she did not pay.

Vote as Americans, Last Landon Word

By William V. Nessly.

Fifty-five million voters were prepared this morning to give the Nation's verdict on the New Deal, but a strange meteorological mixture of snow, rain, zero temperatures and bright sunshine threatened to keep many at home.

The Central States, from Missouri to Michigan and Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nebraska, and such Southern States as Louisiana, Alabama and Texas faced weather conditions by no means conducive to heavy polling.

The campaign was ended, the final shoutings of partisans had quieted across the country. The closing adjurations and pleas, singularly free from last-minute accusations, were with the voters for what they might be worth. All that remained was for party workers to get out the vote.

Seven candidates for the Presidency, most of them without hope of winning, and thousands seeking lesser offices were awaiting the balloting.

Betting odds, which have favored President Roosevelt's re-election throughout the vote drive, fluctuated widely on the last day of the campaign, going to 4 to 1, but closing at 3 to 1 for Roosevelt, a full point above yesterday's opening.

The two major party heads ignored the controversies and dissension that have marked the past few months when they delivered their last messages to the electorate.

G. O. P. Close Solemn.

The Republican campaign was brought to a close last night in a radio program striking in its solemnity and churchly dignity.

An organ, rather than a band, provided music, hymns replaced campaign songs, a Jewish rabbi opened the program and a Catholic bishop ended it and, throughout, the subdued, serious voices of the speakers were in sharp contrast with the blatant campaign orations to which the Nation has become accustomed. From the opening hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," to the closing one, "Lead Kindly Light," the tone of the program was one of solemn deliberation.

In contrast was the Democratic Party's hour, immediately following. President Roosevelt, opening it, held his address on a strictly nonpartisan plane, deploring bitterness, insisting no demagogue or dictator could wield power in America, urging on all the duty to vote.

Then spoke Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, talking on the issues of the campaign and criticizing assailants of the Administration. Senator Robert Wagner, of New York, became bitter in his denunciation of those who had found fault with the social security act which he had helped draft. And National Chairman Farley closed the hour with a straight partisan, organization call for Democratic workers to bestir themselves early and late to get the Democratic followers to the polls.

Landon Stresses American Way.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, headed an even dozen last-hour speakers on his party's broadcast. He urged all to go to the polls "resolved that the American way of life shall not fail," to "vote as Americans for the future of America."

"Let us remember," he said, "the Almighty God who presided over beginnings, and carried us through storm and trial, and without whose guidance we can never attain the destiny that our fathers saw."

President Roosevelt, after a motor trip yetserday through three counties adjacent to his Hyde Park home, went on the air shortly be-

Supreme Court Neutrality Law Hearing Nears

Decision Likely to Bring a More Drastic Act; Conspiracy Charged.

By Felix Bruner.

Because a group of individuals in New York is alleged to have sold 15 machine guns to Bolivia to be used in the recent Chaco war between that country and Paraguay, Congress in the coming session may be faced with revision of the entire neutrality machinery of the United States.

The Supreme Court November 19 will hear arguments in the case involving alleged sale of the guns. The constitutionality of the resolution barring sale of munitions to the South American belligerents is questioned in such a way Government attorneys engaged in the case admit the neutrality law is in jeopardy and that by implication a decision adverse to the Government may cast doubt upon this country's reciprocal trade agreements.

The action is being brought before the Supreme Court by the Government on appeal from an adverse decision of the District Court for the Southern District of New York. The lower court held the resolution of Congress permitting the President to bar shipment of arms to the Chaco was unconstitutional. Because the decision was based upon a demurrer filed by the defendants, the Government was in a position to appeal.

The defendants in the action, which was brought as a criminal case were Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., Inc.; Barr Shipping Corporation, John S. Allard, Clarence W. Webster, Samuel J. Abelow and Robert R. Barr. They are charged with conspiracy to sell the 15 guns.

Under Joint Resolution.

The action was brought under a joint resolution adopted by Congress on May 28, 1934, giving the President authority to bar arms sales to the Chaco belligerents if he believed barring sales would promote peace. The resolution provided a fine up to $10,000 and imprisonment up to two years for violation of the President's order. The President on the Security Board Denies Workers Must Have Tags

By Robert C. Albright.

Target of a shower of last-minute campaign shafts, the Social Security Board came to the defense of its program again yesterday with a flat denial of charges that numbered tags of stainless steel will be issued to 27,000,000 workers registered under the social security act.

The charge was made in Boston Saturday by John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee. He dangled what he said was a specimen tag, attached to a chain. It was stamped with the name of the "Social Security Board" and left space for the name and number of the worker.

Hamilton's claim that the board asked for bids on machines to manufacture the tags, which it planned to hang "around the neck of every man and woman coming under the act," was called "utterly false and fantastic" by the board.

The board said it has no intention of using metal tags of any sort to identify beneficiaries. It also emphatically denied that workers will be compelled to carry cards, similar to police cards now required in some foreign nations.

"Because the old age benefits provision of the act which go into effect next year are in the nature of insurance, the board with the aid of experts for the largest insurance companies in America has worked out a simple system which will involve only the use of an ordinary card such as insurance companies give their policy holders, showing on one side the beneficiaries name, and on the other side instructions on how to obtain official information relative to his

Smith Berates Administration On Ten Counts

Calls President's Madison Square Garden Speech Bigoted, Incendiary.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic candidate for President, today supplemented his five speeches against the New Deal with a final statement in which he summed up his reasons for "taking a walk."

He criticized the Roosevelt Administration on ten major counts, charging it with "stirring up class hatred," "repudiation of the platform in spirit and letter," "vicious attacks on the Constitution" and "inviting into its inner councils, radical advisers without experience, balance or responsibility."

These and the other charges in his statement, he said, "constitute the solemn commandments to a good Democrat to change his allegiance." He did not mention the name of Gov. Alf M. Landon, whose election he urged in all his speeches except one.

Other counts on which he assailed the Roosevelt Administration were:

"For substituting in place of platform pledges a government of sheer opportunism without purpose or principle.

Says Congress Impaired.

"For lowering the prestige and usefulness of Congress and for making it a rubber stamp for the Executive branch of government.

"For waste and extravagance and for saddling a burden of debt upon the Nation which cannot be discharged for generations.

For Election Results—Call DIstrict 1300

FOR THE convenience of Washington Post readers, a special battery of telephones has been installed in The Post's election chart room at which operators will be stationed, beginning at 6 o'clock this evening, to handle all inquiries concerning election results.

THE POST'S election chart, covering 256 square feet of space, will tell the running story of the election from the moment first returns begin to trickle in to the time the final results are known.

FROM THIS master chart, up-to-the-minute returns will be given to the public by phone and radio.

COOPERATING with Station WJSV, early election results will be given over the air at intervals beginning at 6 o'clock. At 11 P. M., The Post's first Electoral Vote Summary will be broadcast direct from the chart room. Others will follow throughout the night until the election is decided.

THE WASHINGTON POST'S first Election Edition will be off the presses as early this evening as first returns may justify. Subsequent editions will follow as frequently as developments warrant. The Post's Final Election Edition will carry complete news and election results from every State in the country.

Complete Text Of Roosevelt's Final Address

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's radio speech from his home here tonight.

My Friends:

I have come home to my own county to vote with my fellow-townsmen. My people have voted here in Dutchess County for more than a century. I cast my first vote here in 1903.

Tomorrow 55,000,000 Americans are eligible to vote. I hope that all of those 55,000,000 will vote.

I like to think of these millions as individual citizens from Maine to the southern tip of California, from Key West to Puget Sound—farmers who stop their fall plowing long enough to drive into town with their wives—wage earners stopping on the way to work or the way home—business and professional men and women—town and city housewives—and that great company of youth for whom this year's first vote will be a great adventure.

Rule of Majority.

Americans have had to put up with a good many things in the course of our history. But the only rule we have ever put up with is the rule of majority. That is the only rule we ever will put up with. Spelled with a small "d," we are all democrats.

In some places in the world the tides are running against democracy. But our faith has not been unsettled. We believe in democracy because of our traditions. But we believe in it even more because of our experience.

Here in the United States we have been a long time at the business of self-government. The longer we are at it the more certain we become that we can continue to govern ourselves—that progress is on the side of majority rule—that if mistakes are to be made we prefer to make them ourselves and to do our own correcting.

When you and I stand in line tomorrow for our turn at the polls we will stand in a line which reaches back across the entire history of our Nation.

Helped Make History.

Washington stood in that line, and Jefferson, and Jackson, and Lincoln. And in later days Cleveland stood there and Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson. All these—in their day—waited their turn to vote. And rubbing elbows with them—their voting equals—is a long succession of American citizens whose names are not known to history, but who, by their votes, helped to make history.

Every man and every woman who has voted in the past has had a hand in the making of the United States of the present. Every man and woman who votes tomorrow will have a hand in the making of the United States of the future. To refuse to vote is to say, "I am not interested in the United States of the future."

We who live in a free America know that our democracy is not perfect. But we are beginning to know also that—in self-government as in many other things—progress comes from experience. People do not become good citizens by mandate. They become good citizens by the exercise of their citizenship and by the discussions, the reading, the campaign give-and-take which help them make up their minds how to exercise that citizenship.

Listen to Both Sides.

Not only are people voting in larger numbers this year. They also know more this year than ever before about the real issues. They are thinking for themselves. They listen to both sides. They no longer accept at face value opinions or even statements from newspapers, from political spokesmen and from the so-called leaders of their communities. They insist on checking up.

I doubt if there was ever more down-right political intelligence at the average American fireside than there is today.

For a century and a half we have had here free education and a free press, free public forums and a free pulpit. For more than a decade we have had a free radio. The American citizen of 1936, therefore, is a product of free institutions. His mind has been sharpened by the exercise of freedom. That is why I have no fear—either of the threats of demagogues or the ambitions of dictators. Neither can get far nor long thrive among a people who have learned to think for themselves and who have the courage to act as they think.

Important Thing.

This year they have thought things through to a point where the eternal simplicities mean more than the fuzz-buzz of technical talk. They know that the important thing is the spirit in which Government will face problems as they come up, and the values it will seek to preserve or to enhance. At bottom those are the things that count.

Still another thing heartens me. This year not only are more people voting, not only have people thought things through more carefully; but more people in all parties have assumed the obligation of citizens to get out and work in the political processes by which democracy maintains itself.

Nearly six months ago I said: "I make this specific recommendation—that each and every one who is interested in obtaining the facts and in spreading those facts abroad, each and every one of you interested in getting at the truth that lies somewhere behind the smoke-screen of charges and counter-charges of a national campaign, constitute yourself a committee of one."

Personal Gratitude.

Hundreds of thousands have responded to that suggestion. Tonight I salute those committees of one—not only with personal gratitude, but with the gratitude of a democracy that can only function if its people are willing to take honorable part in it.

And I also commend those who have worked in a similar honorable way in the opposition. They, too, have helped the public understand the issues before it, and that is a service to democracy.

I confidently look forward to their continued co-operation in the service of democracy. On Saturday night I said that "there should be no bitterness or hate where the sole thought is the welfare of the United States of America." That applies to men and women in all parties. It is true, tonight, on the eve of election. It will be true after the election.

Whoever is elected tomorrow will become the President of all the people. It will be his concern to meet the problems of all the people with an understanding mind and with no trace of partisan feeling.

Constructive Suggestions.

Any President should welcome any American citizen or group of citizens who can offer constructive suggestions for the management of government or for improvement of laws.

Society needs constant vigilance and the interest of individual men and women.

And when you go to the ballot box tomorrow, do not be afraid to vote as you think best for the kind of a world you want to have. There need be no strings on any of us in the polling place.

A man or woman in the polling booth is his or her own boss. There once was a time when the ballot was not secret. That is not so today. How a citizen votes is the citizen's own business. No one will fire you because you vote contrary to his wishes or instructions. No one will know how you vote. And don't let any one intimidate you or coerce you by telling you otherwise.

In the polling booth we are all equals.

It is an experience in responsibility and humility to be permitted, as President, to know and share the hopes and the difficulties, the patience and the courage, the victories and the defeats of this great people.

Reward of Effort.

Sometimes men wonder over much what they will receive for what they are giving in the service of a democracy—whether it is worth the cost to share in that struggle which is a part of the business of representative government. But the reward of that effort is to feel that they have been a part of great things—that they have helped to build—that they have had their share in the great battles of their generation.

However large or small our part, we can all feel with Theodore Roosevelt who said: "It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again; who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumphs of high achievement; and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly; so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither defeat nor victory."

Nation-Wide Stumping For Election Continues; Radio Hailed, in 1932, as Successor.

By Franklyn Waltman

FOUR years ago, when the 1932 Presidential contest came to an end, there were many who believed it was the last campaign that would be conducted in the traditional style in which the major candidates stumped the country from coast to coast, creating the occasion for for huge parades and mammoth meetings and demonstrations, as they daily exhorted the voters to intense emotion in an effort to win their support.

WALTMAN.

Some newspapermen sadly predicted that never again would a Presidential campaign special wind its way across the country like a circus caravan, stopping at crossroads for rear platform talks and then hurrying on for the night stops in the larger cities. And they dropped a tear for the passing of a colorful interlude on the American scene.

Those who believed the 1932 campaign had ended an epoch in political campaigning visualized future Presidential candidates making their appeal for votes over national radio networks, speaking from their libraries or studios, and undertaking to debate the issues of the day calmly and rationally—seeking to appeal to the reason of men and women—and not to arouse their emotions.

Even if the candidates wished to make tours of the country, they would be without audiences, it was thought. With the development of the radio and its increased use, it was argued, men and women no longer would engage in such absurd, ridiculous and nonsensical business of being crushed in huge crowds and yelling themselves hoarse over declarations they could not even hear distinctly. Instead they would sit in the quiet of their homes and hear the opposing arguments and make up their minds—so many thought in 1932.

Well, the 1936 campaign has ended and its style has not been one whit different from the 1932 or 1928 campaigns. The Roosevelt and Landon campaign specials have crossed and recrossed the country. The President has made more speeches and personal appearances than Herbert Hoover did in 1932 and Gov. Alf M. Landon has made more personal appearances and speeches than Mr. Roosevelt did four years ago.

Wherever they went, they were met by huge crowds—larger in many instances than appeared during the 1932 campaign. When they omitted a city from their itinerary loud protests were heard from the local leaders and gentry. Their entry into large cities was marked by the blaring of bands and the parade of political marching clubs.

Red flares glared along the streets over which they passed and in the open-air stadiums in which they spoke. Partisans came to see and hear them, equipped with noise-making devices more repugnant to the human ear than ever before—and each crowd appeared determined to set new records for ear-splitting dins.

As for the abandonment of appeals to emotion—well, in no other campaign in the last generation have the two leading candidates and their chief supporters placed so much emphasis on emotional appeals and so little on reason. Instead of being an education in public matters for the country, this campaign has been a creator of confusion and a fomenter of discord and hatred. Even when the radio has been the only means for speaking to the country, the appeals have been emotional until everyone who has shown any interest at all in the campaign is emotionally exhausted.

In only one respect has this year's campaign been an improvement over previous ones. The widespread use of the radio has forced shorter speeches. Whereas in 1928 and 1932 the major Presidential candidates always spoke at least for an hour, all but a few speeches this year were no longer than 30 minutes while the lesser personages were limited to 15 minutes.

Many thoughtful persons have become disturbed over the bitterness and hatred manifested in this campaign. They have heard the President assailed as a Communist; as practicing fraud on the workers of the country; as unfaithful to the Constitution he has sworn to preserve; they have heard him booed and hissed in motion picture houses and on the streets in some places.

They have heard Mr. Roosevelt himself denouncing large sections of the population as greedy reactionaries and exulting over the hatred of himself which he has inspired. They have heard Gov. Alf M. Landon hissed and booed in motion picture houses and on the streets in some places. They have heard him termed a tool of economic royalists and vested interests. They have heard orators ridicule the Supreme Court. They have heard a Catholic priest publicly call the President a liar and an upstart—and they have heard him make half-hearted apologies.

They have seen some of their newspapers become hysterical over both sides of the campaign. They have read in some newspapers fantastic charges against the President and his Administration, and little good about him; they have read in other newspapers a glorification of President Roosevelt and his every act, and bitter denunciation of his opponent, and little good about him.

They have heard matured men and women solmenly warning that only four, three or two days were left in which we can save our country—save the American way of life; and they have heard matured men and women solemnly warning that the election of Gov. Landon would be disastrous to the Nation, that overnight we would be plunged back into the misery and suffering of 1932 and that all human progress would stop.

If we did not know that few persons pay much attention to such assertions, that few in their hearts really feel the boos and hisses which come from their lips, and that much of this wave of feeling will pass with the ending of the campaign, we would be inclined most emphatically to disagree with the Frenchman who held that "America had come of age."

Roosevelt Said To Plan a Visit To Buenos Aires

Difficulties in Way of Trip to the Peace Conference Numerous, However.

By Sidney Olson.

Speculation on the possibility that President Roosevelt may attend the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, to be opened at Buenos Aires on December 1, grew here yesterday.

White House aids on the President's special train during the final campaign trip last week-end said unofficially the President's proposed long sea-voyage vacation, to begin shortly after Election Day, very possibly would end at Buenos Aires.

It was said in some quarters tentative arrangements already were being made to accommodate him in the Argentine capital.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who leaves this week-end with a distinguished American delegation for the conference, would not confirm the rumor at his press conference yesterday, referring all such questions to the White House.

A State Department spokesman said unofficially he doubted if the President would attend the conference. He pointed out the trip to Buenos Aires, if made by commercial steamer, requires 15 days, with 18 days required for the return. While a battleship could make the trip in somewhat shorter time, only a cruiser could steam both ways in less than 25 days, it was estimated, and cruiser travel is considered rough by all but hardened sailors.

Cited European Situation.

In this connection it also was pointed out that White House sources have repeatedly given during the campaign, as an excuse for omission of a Far Western trip by the President, the reason that he preferred not to be at four days' distance from the White House, in view of the complicated European situation.

A fair argument could be presented either way as to whether the President will go, observers held. Mr. Roosevelt is ardently enthusiastic in the cause of peace, as was evident even in his final campagin speech Saturday night.

Speculation ever since he suggested the peace conference on January 30 of this year has centered about the possibility he might attend. His earnestness in this cause, observers have stated, has even given color to stories, incredible on the surface, that he will suggest an international conference of dictators, rulers and presidents, if he is re-elected, in order to attempt a direct, over-the-table settlement of the world's peace problems.

Difficulties Numerous.

If the President's sea voyage vacation did end up in Buenos Aires, however, it would probably mean abandonment of his annual vacation visit to Warm Springs, Ga., scheduled tentatively to follow his sea trip.

Some of the difficulties attendant on such an international journey by the President, however, can be illustrated by the fact that he could hardly make the trip to Buenos Aires without at least a brief courtesy stop at Rio de Janeiro, capital of Brazil, which would probably entail a corresponding courtesy visit to Santiago, the capital of Chile, on the western side of the South American continent. According to State Department officials, at least these two visits would be necessary if international protocol is to be observed.

Some definite announcement from the White House probably will be made by the end of the week, informed sources held last night.

Supreme Court Neutrality Law Hearing Nears

Decision Likely to Bring a More Drastic Act; Conspiracy Charged.

The lower court held this was an improper delegation of legislative power, that Congress did not in fact pass a law, but that it gave the President the power to make such a law if he saw fit. The neutrality resolution adoptel in 1935 and extended in the last session of Congress is implemented in the same way.

Martin Conboy, special assistant to the Attorney General, who is handling the Chaco case for the Government, told the Supreme Court:

"The question presented is substantial in character. It involves not only the validity of the joint resolution of May 28, 1934 (the Chaco resolution) and the propriety of action taken thereunder, but the very power of Congress to delegate to the executive authority to investigate and make findings in order to implement a legislative process.

Says Ruling Is Important.

"The decision appealed from is important, because if upheld it will operate to nullify in large part the laws enacted by Congress to preserve American neutrality among which * * * is the joint resolution of August 31, 1935, as amended by joint resolution of February 29, 1936."

The latter resolution is the present neutrality law.

Many other laws involve somewhat similar delegation of power. Included in these are the act making possible negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties without action of the Senate and the act providing that the President may adjust tariffs on recommendation of the Tariff Commission.

In ruling on the Chaco resolution, the lower court said:

"It is thought that the joint resolution embodied such attempted abdication of legislative responsibility as to deprive it of constitutional validity. Stated in lowest terms, it is conceived to be the duty of Congress alone to conclude whether a given law will work."

View Is Challenged.

To this, the Government in a brief replied:

"From the beginning of the Government, in the conduct of our foreign relations, Congress has followed the practice of conferring upon the President power similar to that conferred by the presented resolution. * * * The resolution meets every test which this court has established as requisites to a proper delegation of power. The Congressional policy is clearly declared, the standard is adequately defined, and a finding by the President is required in the exercise of his authority to enact the prohibition."

Numerous other New Deal cases have involved alleged improper delegation of legislative functions. Most notable was the NRA case in which the court held Congress had not sufficiently defined limits within which the President could act.

Regardless of the decision of the court, however, Congress is certain to give further consideration to neutrality legislation. The present resolution will expire May 1, 1937, and a continuing resolution or a substitute must be adopted by that time. It is expected there will be a movement, particularly in the Senate, to make neutrality legislation much more drastic than at present.

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—If it's all right with President Roosevelt, Ernest E. Myers would like to have back the $40 gold watch he tossed into the Chief Executive's car during his campaign visit here Thursday.

Myers, unemployed boilermaker, went to William Landvoight, of the Secret Service, today and explained that when Mr. Roosevelt's car passed him and others in a cheering crowd near City Hall, he was "simply carried away by enthusiasm."

News dispatches from Washington Thursday, after the President's return to the Capital, said Mr. Roosevelt wished to know who tossed the watch to him.

Myers was furloughed from the Philadelphia Navy Yard last July.

St. Louis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Samuel C. McCluney, treasurer of the Missouri Republican State committee, said today he paid $1,000 to a St. Louis electrical workers union Saturday night to assure a broadcast of Gov. Alf M. Landon's speech here in his campaign for the Presidency.

McCluney said Arthur F. Schading, business agent for Local No. 1, had "instructed the radio operators who are members of the union not to put the speech on the air unless the money was paid."

Schading said the money was paid to recompense the union for use of nonunion labor on sound trucks sent into Missouri by the Republican National Committee.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Lucy A. Wadsworth, who will be 104 next April 21, cast her vote today when Town Clerk Henry Bacon went to her home to receive her ballot.

Failing sight prevented the aged woman, a regular voter since woman's suffrage became effective, from going to the polls as she did two years ago.

* * * *

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mayor S. Davis Wilson said today he had received information that "gunmen and strong arm men" had been imported from another State, and that "a large number of strike breakers have been employed in connection with tomorrow's election."

In a proclamation, he called on citizens to co-operate in "maintaining law and order for a fair and free election," and announced a special telephone service will be set up so that police can receive emergency calls quickly.

The mayor said, "I'm not telling anybody who I am going to vote for, and I don't care who the city employes vote for."

Ripon, Wis., Nov. 2 (AP).—Vandals early today ripped the front steps from the small schoolhouse on Ripon College campus that is claimed locally as the birthplace of the Republican Party. Windows of the building were broken and lime was thrown on the walls.

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 2 (AP).—Workmen scrubbed today to remove red paint markings from memorial rocks and a bronze tablet under the Jackson oaks, credited here as the birthplace of the Republican Party. Police blamed Halloween pranksters. The tablet was dedicated by President Taft in 1908.

* * * *

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Hecklers, who vociferously expressed New Deal sympathies tonight, virtually disrupted a meeting dedicated to praying for defeat of President Roosevelt.

Shouting "we'll be here a long time," about 20 youths forced their way into the third floor apartment where George W. Smith's "praying band" had gathered for an all night session. One "pulled" a faint and the others talked loudly and smoked. Police were called and ejected three of the intruders.

* * * *

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, speaking as a progressive, tonight urged the re-election of President Roosevelt because "he best represents the views, the principles, and the legislation which we, as progressives of this country, have stood for and fought for during the past quarter of a century."

Speaking in behalf of the American Labor Party in New York State over the radio, LaGuardia explained, "I am not mad at anybody, have no private or political grudge. I am not a Democrat. I have nothing in common with the political machine in my city."

* * * *

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight read to a radio audience a telegram from his bishop, Michael J. Gallagher, asserting his superior had no intention of curtailing the priest's radio activities.

Coughlin quoted Bishop Gallagher as denying he had said that after the election he would forbid priests to indulge in political activities.

"I did not say that and I have no intention of interfering with your radio discussions," the telegram, as read by Coughlin, said.

In his speech Father Coughlin said that "Mr. Roosevelt can repudiate the Communists until kingdom come, but the Communists will not repudiate Roosevelt as long as he stoops to the social security act and the WPA with its slave wages and casts aspersions at the Supreme Court."

Conduit Road Surface Work To Begin Soon

Improvement of Highway From Great Falls to D. C. Starts This Week.

Work will begin this week by the United States Engineers in the resurfacing of Conduit road from Great Falls to the District Line.

The contract has been awarded to Carson & Gruman, of this city.

The surface treatment will consist of a light coat of asphalt and crushed stone. This will be rolled at once, but it will be necessary to keep traffic off short sections of the road for about 24 to 48 hours.

Whenever necessary, sections of the highway will be closed entirely and detours provided.

Work will be started at Great Falls and progress in short sections toward the city. Residents along the road have been asked to cooperate with the engineers.

It is expected the surfacing will be complete by the middle of the month.

All of Eastern Japan Shaken by Earthquake

Tokyo (Tuesday), Nov. 3 (AP).—A sharp earthquake today shook Tokyo and all of eastern Japan at 4:56 a. m. (2:56 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.). The epicenter was in the sea off the coast of Fukushima about 150 miles northeast of Tokyo.

No damage or casualties had been reported up to 9:45 a. m. today. Coming just before dawn, the earthquake awakened the sleeping capital, many of whose citizens rushed into the streets in night attire.

Fund to Assist Edith Maxwell Now Over $300

Money Needed for Expenses in 2d Murder Trial of Young Teacher.

The fund being raised by readers of The Washington Post for the second murder trial of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, went over the $300 mark yesterday.

Contributions were:
Anonymous	$2.00
Charles W. Fairfax	5.00
A Southern Woman	1.00
Anonymous	1.00
Anonymous	1.00
Yesterday's total	$10.00
Previously reported	298.00
Total	$308.00

The money is needed for the traveling expenses of defense witnesses and Attorney Charles Henry Smith, who is giving his services gratis; for the payment of court stenographers and for briefs, affidavits and other expenses incident to a major criminal trial.

Edith Maxwell, whose career as a teacher was cut short by the tragedy, is penniless. So is her brother, Earl, who gave up his traveling salesman's job to help here. These two and their mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, and two younger girls are now on a farm near Richmond, "earning their keep" as tenants.

This is the second time the readers of The Post have gone to the aid of Miss Maxwell. Had they known what would happen to her at the first trial, they probably would have suggested the defense fund earlier.

In that trial, held a year ago this month, a jury of mountaineers at Wise, Va., found Edith guilty of first degree murder and the judge sentenced her to 25 years in the penitentiary. She was accused of killing her father with a slipper. The testimony showed that she swung the slipper at her father while he, in a drunken rage, was choking her, beating her and threatening to kill her. The father died an hour later, and it was Edith who called the physician who tried to save him.

The prosecution said that Edith deliberately plotted her father's murder and the jury agreed. However, Earl Maxwell is convinced that his father, a heavy drinker for 30 years, died of a stroke of apoplexy, brought on by excitement. No skull fracture was found at the autopsy.

Post readers, aroused by the 25-year sentence meted out to Edith, began sending in contributions shortly after the trial. A fight was launched for a new trial, and at The Post's invitation Smith agreed to lead it.

The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, before which Smith carried the fight, decreed that the first degree murder verdict was not justified by the evidence and ordered a new trial. This is to start November 16 at Wise, Va, unless Smith succeeds in winning a change of venue.

Debate on Church Urged by 2,630,000

A petition said to bear 2,630,000 signatures was presented to the Federal Communications Commission yesterday asking the commission approve a Nation-wide broadcast of a debate between "a high official of the Roman Catholic Church" and Judge Joseph F. Rutherford, president of the Watch Tower and Bible Tract Society.

The petition amounted to a truck load and was delivered to the commission's office in a truck by 20 members of the Jehovah's Witnesses' sect. The petition said in part:

"The Roman Catholic press protests the broadcasting of Judge Rutherford's speeches by radio for the reason, as claimed, that he misrepresents the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church concerning salvation of the human race."

Permission was requested for the radio debate "in the general interest, convenience and necessity of the people."

Famous British Barrister Dies

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett, 57, distinguished barrister, collapsed while speaking at a dinner in London tonight and died while being removed in an ambulance.

He was appointed chairman of the London Court of Sessions only two weeks ago. Previously, since 1935, he was chairman of the Essex Quarter Sessions.

Sir Henry, was a son of the late Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett, Chief Metropolitan Magistrate of London.

Sir Henry, who was knighted in 1922, was called to the bar in 1902. He became known as one of the three greatest English barristers of his time, taking rank with Sir John Simon, now Home Secretary, and Sir Patrick Hastings.

For a period after the war he represented either the prosecution or defense in practically every first-class criminal trial in the country.

Starlings Swoop Down, Capture Avenue By Coup as Washington Ponders Politics

With Washington tensely expectant on the eve of a Presidential election, a side issue arose suddenly last night to compete with the electoral college, Mr. Roosevelt's smile and the Constitution as a topic of conversation.

Pennsylvania avenue was captured by starlings!

Maybe is was coincidence or maybe, as the birds' arch enemy suggested, it was because they felt a moral responsibility to reoccupy their old haunts in the Nation's Capital while the electorate was preparing to go to the polls. At any rate, the starling horde chose election eve to take up its position in trees along the Avenue.

Aroused last night from an easy chair in his residence at the District tree nursery at Fort Dupont, Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkings, expressed surprise and chagrin in equal parts when informed the sycamores in front of the District Building were groaning anew under their bird burden.

"Well, doggone," sputtered Lanham, his complacency shattered.

You see, for several years he conducted anti-starling campaigns, sending men out with balloons and Roman candles and pebble-filled tin cans and other disturbing agents, and he was getting around to believe the feathered pests had decided against returning here in large quantities.

"Now, what do you suppose brought them back?" he asked, more as the sad reflection of a general who has been taken by surprise and defeated than as a request for information.

"Perhaps," he continued hopefully, "they just flew in to escape a storm somewhere."

If they've arrived to stay, Washington simply will have to put up with them, as far as his office is concerned, said Lanham, because this time he has no funds to pursue the birds with balloons or anything else.

Formerly he received work relief funds to abate the nuisance, but no such provision has been made this year. Accordingly, motorists who park their cars along Pennsylvania avenue eastward from Fourteenth street, where starling roosts are most numerous, must be prepared for the consequences, Lanham pointed out.

Executing complex mass maneuvers as they scouted for resting places, the unwanted birds converged late yesterday upon the downtown section in the greatest numbers they have mustered here this year.

Although they have been present in reduced congregations since cool weather began, it was not until yesterday that the starlings showed any of their old-time strength, dipping dizzily over the late rush-hour crowds and taking possession of tree and cornice roosts with brazen confidence.

Lanham is desperately hoping that eletcion celebrators will make enough noise downtown to frighten the birds away.

The blowing of horns and whistles tonight, therefore, will be not only a partisan manifestation, but also a civic responsibility.

HELPFUL ADVICE TO ACNE SUFFERERS

For acne pimples affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin, here is advice that will help improve your complexion.

Every night at bedtime, wash your face thoroughly with Resinol Soap and hot water. Do not rub. Follow with a dash of cold water and dry thoroughly but gently. Then apply Resinol Ointment to the affected skin and leave it on all night. Do this every night, and watch the improvement.

Local treatment is advised as a helpful aid in acne cases, and for more than 40 years the ingredients of Resinol have been found effective.

Resinol benefits by treating the irritated oil ducts, where most surface pimples start. In this way it aids healing of such pimples and also tends to check their recurrence.

Buy Resinol Ointment and Soap in any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 13, Baltimore, Md. (Adv.)

Congressmen Will Get Seats For Inaugural

Capitol Architect Prepares Enough Accommodations for All Members.

Here is good news for members of the House—those of them, at least, who are re-elected today, plus the ones who come in as "freshmen" in January:

There will be seats for all when the President takes his oath on the Capitol steps January 20, it was revealed yesterday when David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, announced he will soon advertise for bids to erect the stands.

At past inaugurations there have been seats for Senators but none for the Representatives. They were compelled to stand if they wished to witness the rites. And even standing room was at a premium.

Much grumbling over the inadequacy of accommodations came from their midst when President Roosevelt was inaugurated March 4, 1933. But the plans disclosed yesterday by Lynn will obviate any repetition of the complaints—provided they can reach their seats through the crowds.

Whereas there were only 348 seats on and adjacent to the President's stand in 1933, there will be 807 when the curtain rises next year.

Also, an increase has been provided in the number of benches on the driveway and greensward below but it is slight. A total of 11,524 seats will be installed, compared to 11,322 last time.

According to tentative plans, the 140 seats in Sections 2 and 3 will be assigned to the military, diplomatic corps, Cabinet, Governors and committee on arrangements. Sections 1 and 4 will be devoted to the House and Senate while the President's stand itself, containing 90 seats, will be for members of his immediate party.

President's Son Calls Marriage Talk 'Silly'

Newark, N. J., Nov. 2 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Miss Ethel du Pont arrived from Boston by airplane today, and the President's son greeted inquiries as to whether they planned to be married with the retort: "Don't be silly."

The two got off the airliner separately and sat two seats apart in the company's bus which was to take them to New York. Young Roosevelt said he was going to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., for the election. Miss du Pont, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont, of Greenville, Del., said her destination was "very indefinite."

Roosevelt said he expected his father to win tomorrow, but declined to estimate his plurality because "I don't know much about politics."

Fee to Hear Talk By Mrs. Roosevelt Held Law Breach

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Rev. W. B. Forney, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, protested today against "an admission charge in violation of the law" for an address Sunday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at Temple University.

Forney said he sent a letter to Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of Temple, stating that the 75-cent admisison charge for a Sunday meeting violated Pennsylvania law, and declaring:

"There have been many evasions of the law in recent days, but I cannot conceive of a great university like Temple presenting the First Lady of the Land to a Philadelphia audience, in violation of the State law."

13 Get Prison Terms In White Slave Case

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 2 (AP).—Federal Judge Carroll C. Hincks imposed sentences totaling 7 years and 11 months today on a group of 13 men and women who had pleaded guilty to violations of the Mann act as a result of an investigation which Government agents assert crushed a white slave syndicate doing a $2,500,000 annual business, chiefly in New England.

The jurist also fined a husband and wife, who, the Government contends, amassed a small fortune through vice traffic, a total of $66,000, expressing a determination that none of the defendants shall have an opportunity "to enjoy the profits of their shameless business" upon their release from the penitentiary.

Two Arrested, Duce Asssailed By Paris Crowd

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 2.—A crowd of anti-Fascists shouted "Down with Mussolini" outside the Chambery law court tonight after two Communists were arrested for an attack on Italian Fascists yesterday.

The demonstrators dispersed when police arrived on the scene, while French officials, apprehensive of possible international repercussions, pushed an inquiry into the attack.

A 29-year-old plaster worker named Perrotin and a 40-year-old chauffeur named Croissant were charged with assaulting Charles Soardi, Italian consul. Perrotin later was "provisionally" released.

Four other Fascists were injured in street battles which followed a Blackshirt meeting. Investigators declared the prefect of the Savoy department had warned the Fascists not to hold the gathering.

An Italian official indicated the embassy was considering lodging a protest with the French foreign office.

The complaint, presumably, would deal with both the Chambery fighting and the shooting of Antonio Bertazzo, an Italian subject, at Metz October 9.

The controversy added new chill to Franco-Italian friendship, which Premier Mussolini described as "freezing" in a speech at Milan yesterday.

However, the newspaper Le Temps described the coolness between the two European nations as "superficial."

Informed quarters expressed belief Il Duce's speech only accentuated the growing rift between the Paris and Rome governments.

Gypsy, Cell Mother, Arraigned in Court

Delphia Marks, 26-year-old gypsy, who gave birth to a baby in a Police Court cell block October 16, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday with her sister, Mary, on a charge of attempted robbery. Both women pleaded not guilty and Judge Edward M. Curran took the case under advisement until today.

William L. Curray, 73, of 3701 Massachusetts avenue northwest, testified he was walking on Wisconsin avenue October 16 when an automobile bearing several gypsies drew to the curb and the occupants asked directions. Curray said the women then asked if they could "bless his money."

Curray said he tried to transfer his wallet, containing $150 to $200, from one pocket to another when an attempt was made to snatch it. Bystanders pulled the women away.

Mrs. Marks gave birth to an 8-pound son while she was waiting a hearing on the charge. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

Old Trolley Car Used as Hospital

Richmond, Nov. 2 (AP).—Luther Scott, 18, today lay on his cot in the "hospital" his family improvised from an abandoned trolley car, and said "it still hurts right much when mother dresses my arm."

Luther has been abed since last November 20 when a gasoline torch he was using in mending an automobile radiator exploded. He suffered burns on his throat, arms, back and abdomen. He was taken to a Washington hospital. Doctors there said he didn't have a chance to live.

Several weeks ago they brought the boy back to his home at Chester, near here, put him in the trolley car hospital. His mother stays with him in the car. Seven hours daily it takes to dress the burns.

"Sure am glad to be back here," Luther said today. "In the hospital there was so much groaning——"

Illness Factor In Auto Crash, Says Babcock

Former A.F.G.E. Head Still Is Confined in Hospital; Hearing Delayed.

Still confined in Mount Alto Hospital following his collapse Saturday night, E. Claude Babcock, former president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said last night he "didn't remember" his accident nor arrest for drunken driving near Alexandria, Va.

"I was too confused," he declared, at the same time, explaining he was confined to the hospital as a diabetic patient.

He said he had been suffering from the ailment for several years and it was directly responsible for his collapse in Alexandria Police Court Saturday night.

Meanwhile, charges of driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident against Babcock were continued until Monday by United States Commissioner Barton Phillips in Alexandria. The former Government federation head is free under $500 bond.

According to United States Park Policemen who arrested Babcock, he was driving his auto 85 miles an hour when he sideswiped another car. Asked yesterday if he would fight the charges, Babcock said:

"I don't know — I don't know enough about them. I was too confused."

Minimum Wages Set For New Zealanders

Wellington, N. Z., Nov. 2 (AP).—New Zealanders were assured today of a basic weekly wage of 76 shillings (about $19) for men and 36 shillings (about $9) for women.

This rate was fixed by an arbitration court after several months' consideration. The government had decided that basic wages for men must be sufficient to provide a reasonable standard of living for a man, a wife and three children.

Chicago Group Seeks to Halt HOLC Seizures

Injunction Suit Contends Federal Agency Is Not Constitutional.

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP).—A mass meeting of property owners seeking an injunction restraining the Home Owners Loan Corporation from proceeding with foreclosure suits was called today to meet Wednesday night.

A petition for an injunction was filed Saturday by Attorney Louis Edelberg on behalf of 113 property owners. Edelberg said the action was based on the contention that "the United States has entered the real estate loan busines without constitutional authority to do so."

The plaintiffs, although not asking the court to hold the HOLC act unconstitutional, requested that the corporation be restrained from engaging in further transactions under the act.

Tuan, War Premier Of China, Dies at 72

Shanghai, Nov. 2 (AP).—Tuan Chi-Jui, former premier of China who was responsible for China joining the allied side in the World War, died today. He was 72.

Tuan held two important government posts in 1917 when his nation declared war against Germany. Appointed premier in 1916, he took over the additional duties of the war ministry a year later, expressing strong favor for Chinese support of the allied cause.

He held the double appointment through the war and in 1919 became director-general of the frontier defense bureau.

His highest office was provisional chief executive of China, a post he held during 1924 and 1925. In 1926 he retired from active political life and has lived in seclusion since.

Hearing on D. C. Budget Postponed to Monday

Hearings on the 1928 District budget were postponed yesterday by the Budget Bureau until next Monday.

The Commissioners have submitted a dual budget proposing a subsistence fiscal plan of $42,000,000 and a secondary budget of nearly $48,000,000.

2 Bandits Escape Police in Holdup

Two colored bandits escaped police early yesterday after three shots were fired at them by Third Precinct patrolmen when they were surprised in a robbery attempt on Twenty-third street northwest near New York avenue.

James B. Reyes, of 1444 W street northwest, was accosted by two colored men while walking. The men had their hands in their pockets as if they had guns. Policemen Warren Rinker and Maurice Barco rode by in a scout car during the holdup attempt.

Barco leaped from the car and fired at the men who fled through an alley. The men got nothing from Reyes.

Feeling Great Today?

Look Ahead 10-20-30 Years

Will Nature begin to "lose interest" in you around 50? Not if you give her a "lift" now. Watch your diet. Exercise all over, but not overmuch. Enjoy moderation—it pays... And, if you drink, choose a kind whiskey—one that agrees with you.

You can judge fine whiskey-taste. Do you still "grope" for whiskey-kindness? The research instituted by the House of Seagram has provided a reliable guide to whiskey-kindness—to the form of whiskey most likely to agree with you.

The answer to the question, "How does the human system respond to different forms of whiskey?" discovered this guide. After months of investigation, a group of impartial, fact-finding men proved that Seagram's Crown Whiskies, used in moderation, are kind to the average man—gentle, considerate whiskies...so perfectly blended as to be "A MOST WHOLESOME FORM OF WHISKEY".

In addition to all the rich, mellow taste of the finest whiskies, Seagram's Crowns bring you kindness, a protection which thousands of moderate men rely upon. Ask for Crowns and serve them to your friends at home.

Gen. De Laney, Taft's Ex-Aid, Dies Here at 62

Former Physician at White House Had Been Ill Since Aug. 27.

Brig. Gen. Matthew A. De Laney, 62, of the Army Medical Corps, retired, who served as White House physician during the Taft Administration, died Sunday in Walter Reed Hospital. He had been a patient at the hospital since August 27.

From 1931 until his retirement early this year, Gen. De Laney was an assistant Army surgeon general. His last tour of duty was in command of the Medical Corps Service School at Carlisle, Pa., where he was ordered in 1933.

Less than a month after the United States entered the World War, Gen. De Laney went to France to command Pennsylvania Base Hospital No. 10. Early in 1918 he was appointed laison officer to the British War Office in London and commander of all American medical officers with the British army.

Native of Pennsylvania.

A native of Waymart, Wayne County, Pa., where he was born March 6, 1874, Gen. De Laney was graduated from Pennsylvania Normal School, and obtained his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1898. In 1902 he was graduated from the Army Medical School.

Gen. De Laney also had taken a course in the University of Vienna in 1913-14, and held a certificate of public health from Harvard University. Dickinson College, Iowa, last year made him an honorary doctor of science.

He served in the Philippine insurrection, and then was placed on duty at the White House from 1909 until 1913. He then was ordered to the Mexican border in 1916.

Named School Surgeon.

When the World War ended he became executive officer in the office of the surgeon general, and in 1921 he was named surgeon of the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., and in 1927 he was ordered to assume the same post at Camp Devans, Mass.

Next year he became medical adviser in the public health and sanitation, first to Henry Stimson and then to Dwight W. Davis, who were in turn Governors General of the Philippines.

In 1931 Gen. De Laney was ordered to Carlisle, and he was made a brigadier in 1932.

A fellow of the American College of Surgeons, Gen. De Laney contributed many articles to the medical journals. He was a member of the American Public Health Association and the American College of Physicians and the American Medical Association. He also was a member of Delta Omega.

Was Awarded Medal.

Military honors won by Gen. De Laney included a distinguished service medal from the United States and the Order of St. Michael and St. George of Great Britain.

Field Marshal Douglas Haig mentioned him in dispatches for "gallantry on the field." He was a member of the Order of St. Lazare of Jerusalem.

He belonged to the Metropolitan, Chevy Chase and Army and Navy clubs of Washington, and the Army and Navy and polo clubs of Manila.

Surviving Gen. De Laney is his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth V. De Laney, who was at his bedside when he died.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Epiphany Church, followed by burial with full military honors in Arlington Cemetery.

St. Elizabeths Patient Kills Self by Hanging

John A. Eaton, 34-year-old patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself from an iron ceiling grating with a bed sheet.

Eaton was committed to the hospital in September, 1930, and has attempted to kill himself before, police said. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified the death was a suicide.

BRIG. GEN MATTHEW A. DE LANEY, U. S. A.

Arthur Fihelly, D. C. Detective Sergeant, Dies

Officer Had Outstanding Record; Was Absent on Sick Leave.

Detective Sergt. Arthur T. Fihelly, one of the most popular members of the Metropolitan Police Department, died yesterday in Plymouth, Mass., where he had gone on sick leave. He was 35 years old.

Joining the force on December 22, 1924, Fihelly achieved a noteworthy record as the nemesis of housebreakers, burglars and murderers. He became a precinct detective, May 16, 1927, and the following year was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

He received several commendations and citations for bravery and efficiency. One was for the apprehension of a store robber in 1930, another for the arrest of a colored murderer in 1935.

Sergt. Fihelly was attached to the Fifth Precinct when illness compelled him to take leave of absence August 23. He lived at 1476 Newton street northwest.

Death was caused by a kidney ailment. The detective was born in Plymouth and made an enviable reputation as a semi-professional football player before coming here.

In 1921 and 1922 he held a tackle position on the Washington Mercury team.

Survivors are his wife, the former Stella Coke; six-month-old son, Arthur, jr., his mother, Mrs. Mary Fihelly, and two sisters, Mrs. Elma Reed and Miss Irene Fihelly, all of Plymouth, and a brother, John Fihelly, an assistant United States attorney here.

Funeral services will be held in Plymouth tomorrow.

Big Utility Plans $5,000,000 Expansion

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Commonwealth Edison Co., Chicago power concern, will construct additional generating capacity at a cost of $5,000,000 under a program announced today by James Simpson, chairman.

Plans call for completion of the No. 2 generating unit of the Chicago District Electric Generating Co.'s State line station, adding 95,000 kilowatts to Edison's power reservoir. Simpson said steadily growing consumption was the reason for the company's decision.

Lorenzo Viani Dies.

Rome, Nov. 2 (AP).—Lorenzo Viani, 54, a prominent Italian artist and writer, died unexpectedly today of heart disease. Viani's paintings are exhibited in many Italian art galleries. He illustrated one of the works of the noted writer Gabriele D'Annunzio.

Daughter of Ship Captain Life-Long Member of St. Paul's Church.

Miss Constance Boush, 80, well-known Alexandria resident, died last night at Alexandria Hospital after a brief illness.

Two months ago Miss Boush closed her summer home at Orkney Springs and went to Mount Jackson to visit a niece, Miss Effie Moore. While there she fell down a flight of stairs and injured her back.

She entered the hospital, then left it two weeks ago. However, several days ago she returned for rest and treatment.

Daughter of Capt. Nathaniel Boush, master of a sailing vessel, Miss Boush was a native of the city. As a small child she witnessed many stirring incidents of the Civil War.

Miss Boush was a member of the board of lady managers of Alexandria Hospital, a life-long member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and a member of the Cameron Club.

Canada Organizes Transport Office

Ottawa, Nov. 2 (AP).—Land, sea and air transportation and all government activities in passenger and freight systems were consolidated today into the department of transport.

C. D. Howe, head of the new department, indicated that the scope of the department would include:

Plans for the immediate establishment of trans-Canada air mail and passenger services with field facilities equal to the best in America.

Extension to the Pacific Coast of the proposed British air service from England to Montreal, to be operative in 1938.

Conversion of the board of railway commissioners into a transportation commission with regulatory powers over all forms of transportation.

Bank Bandit Kills Janitor.

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (AP).—A hooded robber shot and killed Joseph Marento, a janitor, in a holdup of a Bank of America branch here today. The holdup man escaped with an undetermined amount of cash after binding and gagging the manager, W. B. Martino.

Navy Flier Loses Life In California Crash

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 2 (AP).—Commander Melvin Stewart Brown, 38, of the aircraft carrier Lexington was reported killed today when his single-seater fighting plane crashed in the mountains 40 miles east of here.

Ranchers said they had heard the motor of his plane missing fire. Mrs. Bertha Foss, Descanso, said she saw the plane plummet to earth.

Snow, Rain Due To Reduce Vote In West Today

Candidates Make Final Appeals to the Voters in Broadcasts.

fore midnight and asked the voters not to be "afraid to vote as you think best for the kind of a world you want to have."

"No one will fire you because you vote contrary to his wishes or instructions," he said. "No one will know how you vote. And don't let anyone intimidate you or coerce you by telling you otherwise. In the polling place we are all equals."

After intense interest in the personalities and issues had brought an all-time record vote registration, forecasts of bad weather last night were shaking hopes in both major parties for an equally huge turnout of those entitled to the suffrage.

With a blanket of snow, ranging up to 12 inches in depth, in northern Utah, southeastern Idaho and western Wyoming, and a snowtsorm raging in South Dakota, the forecast for today included:

Rain turning to snow in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri and eastern Minnesota.

Rain and colder for portions of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas, with a cold wave in northwest Arkansas.

Scattered showers along the Atlantic seaboard and heavier rains in the East Central States.

Warm and mild in most of the East from Tennessee and Virginia to New England.

Generally fair and warm for Florida, the Carolinas and Georgia.

Fair and cool in the Far West.

Slowly rising temperatures in Colorado and Wyoming, where there was some snow yesterday, and Montana.

Stresses Responsibility.

The closing talks of President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon were timed to reach a maximum number of hearers from coast to coast. From his Topeka home, the Republican chieftain said, as reported by the Associated Press:

"We face tomorrow a grave responsibility. This responsibility is not only to our own well-being in the years just ahead, it is a responsibility to the ideals of free and popular government upon which our Nation was founded. It is a responsibility to a world which stands at a parting of the ways. The world needs a free America. We must hold the line of democracy. We dare not fail.

"We still have before us a great task and a great destiny. We must prove to the world by our calmness, understanding and unity, that democracy still lives."

He urged listeners to "maintain the eternal principles that have made us great—love of liberty, a passion for justice, and the habit of human tolerance," he added:

"Let us go (to the polls) resolved to preserve a form of government that has brought us a spiritual and material well-being, that is the envy of the world. Let us go resolved that the American way of life shall not, cannot fail."

Vote as Americans.

He said citizens will not approach the ballot boxes as farmers, workers or relief clients but as Americans.

"We vote secure in the knowledge that we are responsible to no authority except the authority of our own conscience.

"And after we have cast our vote, let us be resolved to take up the task that lies before us * * * as Americans, determined to hold this Nation united in the future as in the past—determined to keep it moving forward along the path of greatness—determined to keep it free."

He ended his spoken message with this solemn quotation from James Russell Lowell's "democracy":

"'Our healing is not in the storm or in the whirlwind * * * but will be revealed by the still, small voice that speaks to the conscience and the heart, prompting us to a wider and wiser humanity."

Others speaking on the Republican hour included:

Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential nominee; National Committee Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, President Willam Hutcheson, of the United States Bortherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Mrs. Arnold Sayer, introduced as "a housewife;" Agnes Samuelson, Iowa State Superintendent of public instruction; Donald T. Field, Boston attorney; President Ernest F. Pihlblad, of Bethany (Kans.) College; D. R. McCrery, "dirt farmer" of Alburnett, Iowa, and Roscoe Conkling Simmons, colored orator, of Chicago. Rabbi Michael Aaronsohn, of Cincinnati, sounded the invocation, and Bishop F. C. Kelley, of Oklahoma City, delivered the closing benediction.

Roosevelt Praises Democracy.

President Roosevelt, speaking on a program that included National Chairman James A. Farley, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, told the voters there is no danger that democracy would ever be lost to the American people or that "demagogues" or "dictators" would ever "thrive among people who have learned to think for themselves and who have the courage to acts as they think."

"Americans have put up with a good many things in the course of our history," he said, as reported by the Associated Press, "but the only rule we have ever put up with is the rule of majority. That is the only rule we ever will put up with. Spelled with a small 'd' we are all democrats.

"In some places in the world the tides are running against democracy. But our faith has not been unsettled. We believe in democracy because of our traditions. But we believe in it even more because of our experience.

"Here in the United States we have been a long time at the business of self-government. The longer we are at it the more certain we become that we can continue to govern ourselves—that progress is on the side of majority rule—that if mistakes are to be made we prefer to make them ourselves and to do our own correcting."

He said he had observed during the present campaign that the people know more this year than ever before about "the real issues" and are "thinking for themselves."

"I doubt if there was ever more downright political intelligence at there is today," he continued.

"For a century and a half we have had here free education and a free press, free public forums and a free pulpit. For more than a decade we have had a free radio. The American citizen of 1936, therefore, is a product of free institutions. His mind has been sharpened by the exercise of freedom.

"That is why I have no fear—either of the threats of demagogues or the ambitions of dictators. Neither can get far nor long thrive among people who have learned to think for themselves and who have the courage to acts as they think."

Earlier, speaking to neighbors from a hotel balcony at Poughkeepsie, the President said, according to the Associated Press, that the campaign had convinced him of two things—that the American people want to retain the representative system of government" and that they "want progress."

He said the time had come to "accomplish more things for the average citizen" and expressed the belief the Administration in the last few years had taken steps to bring about a greater security "within the framework of the American form of government."

He urged all voters to go to the polls today so that questions of the hour may be decided in a "definite clear-cut" manner.

He added that, unlike former times, when the voting franchise was limited, a person did not have to be a property-holder but "just a man" to cast a ballot today and that this meant the man elected President would be chosen by "a majority."

He spoke to a cheering crowd spread out on Market street, which police estimated at 5,000.

"In spite of all that has been said," he added, "I'm not going to make a political speech tonight. I'm just going to tell you a few things on my chest. I have visited a great many States * * * and I've never seen a campaign in 25 years where I could feel inside of me how the people were taking such an intelligent interest in national affairs."

"People in all sections," he said, have begun to "study the future of America."

"I believe we have taken steps in the last few years to bring security within the framework of the American form of government * * * That is a simple expression of a simple philosophy."

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, in a statement at New York, spoke of what he called "the critical necessity" of ending Mr. Roosevelt's "dangerous and demagogic reign." He called the President's Saturday speech "vindictive, bigoted, egotistical and incendiary."

In the Republican broadcast last night Hutcheson, labor leader, said President Roosevelt had failed to solve the unemployment problem, had "spent $2 for every $1 received" and "incurred the highest national debt in the history of the country."

Mrs. Longworth, daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt, said "competent administration and the ending of experiments which conflict with the Constitution" would be brought about by Landon's election.

Agnes Samuelson upheld Gov. Landon's handling of the Kansas school situation; Field criticized the social security act; Pihlblad lauded the nominee's record as Governor of Kansas; McCrery said the Landon farm program "will give the farmers the safety they want," Mrs. Sayer declared "I would feel safer with Landon in the White House," and Simmons asserted that "on one side are Landon and liberty, on the other side are Roosevelt and ruin."

Knox Predicts Victory.

Col. Knox declared:

"Tomorrow America gives a ringing 'No' to him who talks of being master of American free men and women."

Chairman John Hamilton thanked "thousands upon thousands" of independents and Democrats who "placed the welfare of our country above all else."

In the Democratic program Senator Wagner described the attack on the social security act as "a last desperate maneuver of the Republican opposition that the American people will indignantly repudiate."

Farley thanked those who have taken part in the President's campaign, calling them "patriotic soldiers in a conquering army."

nook and corner of the country, over-running the States and municipalities, prying into everyone's personal affairs, and in every essential respect like the British army which was quartered on the American colonies.

"For its fantastic claim that it has brought back prosperity in the face of the number of unemployed, and of the fact that substantially every advance and improvement in business conditions has been due to the tremendous vitality of private initiative, operating in the face of every obstacle which could be put in its way by the Administration."

Cites President's Speech.

In conclusion, he said that if any further proof had been needed to show the soundness of his charges against the New Deal, it was furnished by the President in his speech at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

"That was the most bitter, the most intolerant, wild and fanatical, oration ever delivered by a high official in this country," Smith said, "and certainly nothing like it was ever heard before from the occupant of the White House.

"Those of us who disagree with the President are invited to leave the country and it is hinted broadly that if we do not leave voluntarily we will be thrown out. * * * the President tells the country that he has been a match for those opposed to him in the last four years. But that in the next four he proposes to be their master.

"Upon a similar momentous occasion Abraham Lincoln rising to the full dignity and tradition of the Presidential office, preached malice toward none and charity for all. I ask the citizens of this country, before they cast their vote tomorrow, to compare these words of Lincoln with the vindictive, bigoted, egotistical and incendiary speeches of Roosevelt last Saturday night at Madison Square Garden."

G.O.P. Will Transport Voters in 75-Mi. Radius

Republican headquarters here announced late last night free transportation will be furnished District residents who wish to cast their votes in all points within a radius of 75 miles.

The cars will be manned by volunteer drivers, and leave 1413 H street northwest at 8 a. m. and noon. Should the number of voters by sufficiently great, special voters' buses will be charted.

Buddy Raised to Bishop.

The Very Rev. Charles F. Buddy, rector of St. Joseph's Cathedral, St. Joseph, Mo., has been appointed bishop of the newly formed diocese of San Diego, Calif., according to word received last night by the National Catholic Welfare Conference from Rome.

Text of Landon's Address

Topeka, Nov. 2.—The text of Gov. Alf M. Landon's final radio appeal to the electorate tonight follows:

During the last four months I have traveled through many parts of the country and over many miles. It has been my privilege to meet thousands of my fellow citizens and to address thousands more. Everywhere I have gone I have seen great numbers of men and women who have given both time and energy in making clear, as they understand them, the issues that face the country. To these men and women I want to pay my tribute for performing the duties of citizenship. There has been no campaign for many years in which they have been so sensible of their responsibilities.

Basic Principle.

It is the basic principle of the American form of government that so long as our citizens understand the issues that are before them, their decision will be the right decision. It is the basic principle of our form of government that the issues may be left with safety to the tribunal of the people, a tribunal that has never failed in its duty when given a leadership that respected the combined wisdom of the people. I am confident that the people understand the issues before them in this election. I am confident that they will go to the polls tomorrow united in one aim—to vote as Americans for the future of America.

All regions of our country, all diverse interests within our borders, progress not by themselves, but as parts of a single and united Nation.

Vote as Americans.

We go to the polls tomorrow not as farmers, not as workers in industry, not as workers on relief. We go as Americans. And when we stand before the ballot box we lay aside the prejudices of section or of group. We vote secure in the knowledge that we are responsible to no authority except the authority of our own conscience.

And after we have cast our vote let us be resolved to take up the task that lies before us, not as farmers, not as workers in industry, not as workers on relief, but as Americans, determined to hold this Nation united in the future as in the past—determined to keep it moving forward along the path of greatness—determined to keep it free.

Grave Responsibility.

We face tomorrow a grave responsibility. This responsibility is not only to our own well-being in the years just ahead. It is a responsibility to the ideals of free and popular government upon which our Nation was founded. It is a responsibility to a world which stands at a parting of the ways. The world needs a free America. We must hold the line of democracy. We dare not fail.

Not far from the Kansas home where I am speaking tonight ran the great trails to the West—the Santa Fe trail, the Oregon trail, the Overland trail. Across these trails tracked the pioneers.

These men and women had energy, determination and self-reliance. They had courage. And they had vision. Through their characters ran simplicity, steadfastness and abiding faith. They gave up comforts, home and quiet ways and dared to go forth through hardship and danger to build a world of the future.

Need Their Attributes.

We need the courage of those men and women. We need their determination and their self-reliance. We need the vision that enabled them to look beyond the present and see the world in which their children would prosper and be free. And above all we need their simplicity, their steadfastness and their abiding faith.

We still have before us a great task and a great destiny.

We must prove to the world, by our calmness, understanding and unity, that democracy still lives.

Let us go to the polls tomorrow resolved to maintain the eternal principles that have made us great — love of liberty, a passion for justice, and the habit of human tolerance. Let us resolve to preserve a form of government that is the envy of the world. Let us go resolved that the American way of life shall not, can not fail.

Keep the Faith.

And let us go resolved to keep the faith. Let us remember the Almighty God who presided over our beginnings, who carried us through storm and trial, and without whose guidance we can never attain the destiny that our fathers saw.

"Our healing is not in the storm or in the whirlwind, * * * but will be revealed by the still small voice that speaks to the conscience and the heart, prompting us to a wider and wiser humanity."

Tribute Is Paid Mrs. Anne Macy At Rites Here

Ashes of Teacher of Helen Keller Placed in Chapel at Cathedral.

The ashes of Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, who brought light to Helen Keller, were given a resting place at Washington Cathedral yesterday.

"Properly called one of the greatest teachers of all time," was a tribute given by Bishop James E. Freeman at the services.

Mrs. Macy was the first woman to receive the honor of sepulture in the cathedral. Her ashes were placed in the columbarium adjoining the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea in the cathedral crypt.

Miss Keller, accompanied by her secretary, Miss Polly Thompson, sat near the altar and listened as she had been taught to listen by Mrs. Macy. Miss Keller and members of the Macy family came here from New York.

Music Opens Services.

The services were opened by organ music and singing of "Lead Kindly Light" by Ross Farrar, tenor soloist of the cathedral choir. Cannon Stokes read the psalms and lesson.

Comparing Mrs. Macy with Florence Nightingale, Bishop Freeman said the cathedral was honored in giving a resting place to Mrs. Macy.

"But possibly no recorded service rendered by a woman bears comparison with her supreme accomplishment in bringing light to one whose life was enveloped in black darkness," said Bishop Freeman.

"The touch of her hand did more than illuminate the pathway of a clouded mind," the bishop continued. "It literally emancipated a soul. When St. Paul, on the way to Damascus, received his high commission, he was told that one of its purposes in ministering to men was to 'turn them from darkness to light.' This was in consonance with the word of Christ himself, where He said: 'I am come into the world that they which see not might see.'"

Near "Divine Service."

"In bringing light and understanding to the unresponding mind of Helen Keller," Bishop Freeman said, "Mrs. Macy gave to the world one of the rarest women of our generation. The friendship of Mrs. Macy with her great pupil constitutes a record of service of incomparable value. It is utterly reminiscent of the ministry of Him who restored men and women—men and women who had met with grave misfortune—to the normal ways and habits of life. In many respects it is the nearest approximation of divine service of which this generation has knowledge."

"It was more than patience and persistence and excelling skill that made the work of Mrs. Macy so notable," he continued. "It was a deep and understanding love that would not recognize failure or defeat; a love that resisted and overcame every obstacle and triumphed because it was love. The names of the teacher and her distinguished pupil constitute one of the most glowing annals in the history of our age. In a period that is characterized by quest for material things and material values, where there is much of sordidness and selfishness, the work of Mrs. Macy furnishes an example of Christian service and devotion that merits our profoundest admiration and encourages us to believe that the ministry of Christ is not without witnesses in our modern age."

Mrs. Simpson, King Will Dine With Atwills

Former Louis Ceromwell, Third Husband to Be Guests Wednesday.

Maryland. Mrs. Simpson, now 40, was invited there when she was a debutante.

It may be that Wednesday's dinner will be in the nature of an au revoir for the dashing Wally, who is expected soon to sail for a lengthy sojourn in Bermuda.

Gradually news of Mrs. Simpson's recent divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson and talk of her marrying King Edward are spreading over England, notwithstanding what still amounts to a censorship on the part of London newspapers.

Edward Reads U. S. Reports.

King Edward himself is thoroughly aware of the sensation he and Mrs. Simpson have created in the United States.

He has been given clippings from American newspapers and magazines and also cabled digests of reports that he will marry the attractive Baltimore brunette.

If these have disturbed him, he has given no sign. It is known he has had tea with Mrs. Simpson since her divorce was granted, and now he is about to have dinner with her under such circumstances as to make it almost certain all England eventually will know about it.

Mrs. Atwill's Debut Lavish.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who, according to The Post's London correspondent, has been invited to have dinner with King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, was a famous belle here prior to her first marriage.

She is the daughter of Mrs Edward T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia, by her first husband, the late Oliver Cromwell.

Her debut here was one of the most elaborate and talked-about events in Washington's social history.

The debut party was given in the old Rauscher's at Connecticut avenue and L streets northwest. For the occasion Rauscher's was converted into a garden, the rooms glorified with cedar trees, smilax, asparagus vines, palms and roses. Canaries sang in their cages and a breakfast was served after midnight.

After her marriage to Walter B. Brooks in 1911, the wealthy young woman went to live in Baltimore. She divorced Brooks after he had served in France through the World War, then came to Washington and purchased the house at 1770 Massachusetts avenue. There she lived with her two children, Louise and Walter B. Brooks 3d, until her marriage to Gen. MacArthur in February, 1922.

This wedding, one of the outstanding events of that season, took place at Elmirasol, the winter home of Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury at Palm Beach, Fla.

In divorcing Gen. MacArthur in Reno in June, 1929, the present Mrs. Atwill charged the famous officer had failed to provide her with the common needs of life. Gen. MacArthur did not contest the suit.

Mrs. Billings Dies; 'Induced' Lincoln To Grow a Beard

Delphos, Kans., Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Bedell Billings, 88, who as a girl was reputed to have induced Abraham Lincoln to grow a beard, died today.

During the election campaign of 1860, Mrs. Billings, then an 11-year-old girl living in Westfield, N. Y., noticed some election poster portraits of Lincoln.

"Shocked," as she described it, by his smooth-shaven face, she scrawled this letter to the Republican Presidential nominee:

"Dear Mr. Lincoln: I think you would look better with whiskers. Two of my brothers are Republicans; two are Democrats. I think I could get my Democratic brothers to vote for you if you wore a beard. The rail fence around your picture in the poster is very pretty. Have you any little girls?"

Four days later, she received this answer from Lincoln:

"My Dear Grace Bedell: Your very agreeable letter of the 15th received. I regret to say I have no little girl. I have three sons, one 17 years old, one 9 and one 7. Speaking of whiskers, don't you think people would call it a silly affectation if I should begin wearing whiskers?"

Mrs. Billings said in an interview several years ago that in February after his election, Lincoln stopped at Westfield and asked her to come forward.

"He climbed down and sat down with me on the edge of the station platform," she recalled.

"'Gracie,' he said, 'look at my whiskers. I have been growing them for you.' Then he kissed me. I never saw him again."

Indian Girl's Death Due to Heart Attack

A certificate of death due to a heart attack was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday after an autopsy was performed on the body of Ruth Hayes, 21-year-old Indian, of 2210 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Miss Hayes, an employe of the Indian Affairs Bureau, was found dead in the bathroom of a house at 733 Twenty-second street northwest, where she was visiting. Police released Howard Gelston, 33, of the Pennsylvania avenue address, after the post mortem.

Partisan Killed in Riot.

Bucharest, Nov. 2 (Jewish Telegraph Agency) — One person was killed today and 20 injured in a clash between members of the anti-Semitic National Christain Party and adherents of the Democratic National Peasants Party in the town of Vaslui. Gen. Gabriel Negrei, a member of the Plasants Party, was arrested charged with firing the fatal shot.

Time Off to Cast Vote Allowed D. C. Workers

Following the precedent of the Federal departments, the District Commissioners yesterday issued an order that District employes residing in Maryland and Virginia may take off two hours today, with pay, to cast their ballots.

There is no record of how many District employes live in the adjacent States.

Victim of Halloween Revelers Recovering

Slashed on the throat by Halloween revelers Saturday night, Mrs. Margaret Tucker, 25, of 3547 Eleventh street northwest, was reported recovering in Garfield Hospital yesterday.

Meanwhile, police are searching for five colored men in connection with the cutting of Mrs. Tucker and John Russo, 27, of 2524 L street northwest.

Awaiting The Verdict.

For months national tranquillity has been disturbed by violent partisan feuds. Now the tumult and the shouting are over. Only the verdict remains to be applauded.

It would be Utopian to hope that the electorate will vote today in fulfillment of a careful weighing of the merits of the respective candidates, the party platforms, the record of the last four years and the issues which lie ahead. Now, as in the past, a host of completely extraneous considerations will help determine the final outcome of the balloting. Nor can it be said that the campaign just ended has been conspicuously successful among efforts to educate the electorate.

Political campaigns, in general, do not show up the American people and American democracy at their best. They are, as a rule, too steeped in emotionalism to serve the intended purpose of helping the voters decide rationally between alternative policies. More often than not the issues most vehemently debated are not the real issues facing the Nation, but only those which the managers of this party or that are convinced will enhance their side's chances of victory. This campaign has been no exception to that custom.

Nonetheless the American system, with all its faults, and they are glaring largely because no effort is made to conceal them, has its enormous advantages. The voters who will today flock to the polls by millions are not being driven there to approve the predetermined decision of some dictator. They are completely free to choose between rival candidates. And when the voting is counted there will be no question as to the acceptance of the verdict by the defeated contestants and those who supported them.

Not through the operations of any coup d'etat, not through the instrumentality of a trumped-up plebiscite, but peacefully and freely do the American people change their rulers or give them a mandate to continue. This is the American way of confronting problems which elsewhere have brought violence, bloodshed and the collapse of democracy. As we recall what has taken place in Italy, in Germany, in Russia, what is now happening in Spain, the anticipated placidity of our election should give us justified pride and a deep sense of gratification.

Population Trends.

In the six years that have elapsed since the last census was taken, according to estimates now made public by the Census Bureau, nine States in widely separated parts of the Nation have suffered a decline in population. The population as a whole, however, increased during that period by 5,654,000, or at the rate of 4.6 per cent.

Of the nine States in question, eight, namely New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Montana, New Mexico, Arizona, South Dakota and Mississippi, are wholly or largely agricultural; only one, Rhode Island, can be classified as predominantly industrial.

Undoubtedly local and special factors operated in each individual case to help produce a decline in population. But the general trend reflected in the Census Bureau's figures is the same as that shown by American population statistics for several decades—the trend toward greater urbanization. In 1880, for instance, 71.4 per cent of the population of the United States was rural. But by 1930 that percentage had fallen to 43.8 and seemingly is still declining, despite a temporary offset during the depression.

In this respect American experience is in line with that of other nations whose economic development has been similar to our own. This parallel is further borne out by the fact that the rate of population growth for the United States as a whole is undoubtedly slowing up. During the past six years the estimated average net annual increase was 941,000. Between 1900 and 1910, with a much smaller total population, the average annual increase amounted to more than 1,500,000, much of it, of course, from immigration.

In some European countries, notably France, the curve of population has already flattened out, with births and deaths about canceling each other. Other nations, such as Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries, are fast approaching a similar balance. With few exceptions, the general tendency everywhere appears to be in the direction of stabilized populations. Students of the subject predict that this condition will be reached by the United States before the end of the century.

In any case, the decline in rate of population growth, here as elsewhere, as well as the continued movement away from rural to urban areas, constitute phenomena of the utmost national importance. For the social, political and economic consequences of these trends are bound to be of revolutionary importance, even if we discount the fears of those who argue that such manifestations of "race suicide" are evils in themselves.

Mr. Thomas Indicts.

As the campaign now closed was getting under way, Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate for President, made a strong plea for "a degree of straightforward explicitness in the discussion of issues of which the average American campaign is almost wholly innocent."

For a time it seemed as if the major candidates and their supporters would follow this sound advice, emphasizing the importance of principles and clarifying the specific policies between which the electorate is asked to choose. Unfortunately, as the campaign progressed, appeals to prejudice and blind partisanship interfered with calm and reasoned debate, while vague promises more and more took the place of constructive recommendations.

In his closing speech at Madison Square Garden on Sunday, Mr. Thomas was able, therefore, to present a strong indictment of the tactics of both major parties. The issues before the electorate are complex, serious and fundamental. They should have been discussed exhaustively with a view to finding solutions for the pressing economic, financial and social problems that confront the country. Instead, the conduct of the campaign in general justifies Mr. Thomas' charge that the "American politician is specific only in his criticisms of the other party." As an example may be cited his observation that "platitudinous generalities" about the blessings of peace do not touch the real peace issue.

Mr. Thomas was unsparing in his criticism of a Republican leadership which has promised balanced budgets and lower taxes, without explaining how these objectives are to be reconciled with the party's plans for farm subsidies, ample pensions for the aged and generous relief for the unemployed. His chief complaint, however, is that Republican criticisms, even when right or half right, "have destroyed the effect by exaggeration and utter lack of a constructive program."

The indictment of the Democratic procedure is even harsher and more sweeping. Mr. Thomas notes that the President has returned no specific answers to questions about his plans for dealing with unsolved unemployment problems. He has refused to discuss the grave constitutional issues raised by his efforts to control economic processes through creation of the AAA and the NRA. And the opportunistic, evasive character of his program is, in the opinion of the leader of the Socialist Party, strikingly shown by the strangely assorted groups supporting his candidacy. "Quite obviously," Mr. Thomas sedately concludes, "some of these people are going to be disappointed." Or, in the vernacular preferred by Alfred E. Smith, "somebody is going to be double-crossed."

It is encouraging that the country has shown an increasing distrust of the demagogue who, like Father Coughlin, substitutes sound and violence in speech and action for rational exposition. But we have not yet rid ourselves of what Mr. Thomas aptly describes as the "popular habit of voting against something rather than for something." Even the detached Mr. Thomas is affected by this national weakness. He is far more explicit in denouncing the ills of capitalism than in explaining how he, if President, would proceed to redeem his promise of "plenty, peace, freedom and the brotherhood of man."

Belated Criticisms.

The last-minute emergence of the social security act as a campaign issue has concentrated public attention on one of the most important pieces of legislation passed during the Roosevelt Administration. And there is certainly a moral in the fact that a measure so intimately affecting the welfare of millions of wage-earners should be so little understood as to invite a flood of belated propaganda clearly designed to discredit the plan in the eyes of labor.

Blame for this unfortunate state of affairs rests in part upon the shoulders of a Congress which voted the law without sufficiently careful consideration of its detailed provisions or adequate debate of the proposal on its merits. It is another one of the numerous cases in which the legislative branch of government has neglected its duty to inform itself and the country on all the assets and deficiencies of vital legislation.

In this instance, it cannot be said that the social security program was rushed through by an impatient executive. On the contrary, it was the result of careful, expert study, although some of its provisions are notwithstanding open to serious objection. That is admitted by many who believe that the legislation is sound in principle and admirable in purpose.

Indeed, three of the eleven members of the National Advisory Council which helped to frame the social security act have publicly declared that it should be amended. If Congress had done its duty by threshing over all debatable points of this complex legislation, it is highly improbable that leading industrialists such as Messrs. Swope, Teagle and Lewisohn would now find it necessary either to defend the act in principle or to confess that it is in need of revision before it becomes fully operative.

Like A Punch-Drunk Boxer.

The international non-intervention agreement which came into force a few weeks after the outbreak of the rebellion in Spain, is now more honored in the breach than the observance. Yet no nation has so far plucked up enough courage to denounce the co-operative effort and openly go its own sweet way on the Spanish problem.

The purpose behind the agreement was unquestionably sound and entirely laudable. With the Fascist powers supporting the rebels and the anti-Fascist nations, particularly Russia and France, strongly tempted to aid the regular government as they had a clear right to do under international law, there has throughout been real danger that the Spanish civil war may develop into a general European conflict.

With this in mind the French proposed an international "hands-off" policy. And despite the subsequent history of the agreement finally reached, it has unquestionably helped to stabilize the peace of Europe during a very critical period.

Perhaps it was too much to expect that all nations would with equal loyalty live up to their pledges to refrain from aiding either side. But from the very beginning of this agreement suspicions arose that this or that nation was secretly evading its commitments.

Over a month ago Russia accused Germany, Italy and Portugal of having supplied arms, ammunition and airplanes to the rebels. These charges the three powers in question indignantly repudiated and in turn have made circumstantial countercharges against the Soviet government.

Failing to secure satisfaction from the committee of neutrals at London, where its thorny proposal for an Anglo-French blockade of the Portuguese coast has so far been ignored, Russia recently declared that it would no longer consider itself bound by the "hands-off" agreement. More exactly, the Russians sarcastically declared that, henceforth, they would live up to the "hands-off" agreement only to the extent that others do. Since then Portugal has broken off diplomatic relations both with Moscow and Madrid and is obviously preparing to recognize the rebels. Germany and Italy have indicated that they will do likewise.

In the meantime the Madrid government has apparently received from Russia a supply of airplanes, tanks and other valuable supplies which have enabled it to take the offensive in the fight now raging for possession of the capital. There can no longer be any doubt, therefore, that Spain has become in more than a metaphorical sense the battleground of rival groups of power.

The upshot of all these developments is that the "hands-off" agreement is now reeling like a punch-drunk boxer on the verge of the final knockout. And observers note that the experiment of transferring the center of international co-operative effort for peace from Geneva to London has proved anything but a success.

Referendum In Oregon.

Oregon voters will today hold a referendum on whether military training should be optional instead of compulsory in State-supported schools. This will be the first State-wide expression of voters on the subject. Should the referendum result in the abandonment of compulsory drill, doubtless the several national antiwar organizations which have worked to pose the question in Oregon will be encouraged to organize similar campaigns in other States.

If nothing else, the Oregon plebiscite should clear up a prevalent misunderstanding as to the Government's attitude toward military training in the schools. The Morrill land-grant act of 1862 requires all colleges receiving Federal funds under the act to provide courses in military training. However, it has been ruled that the provisions of the act are fulfilled if military courses are merely available to students on an optional basis. Thus it was that the University of Wisconsin in 1923 and the University of Minnesota in 1934 could abolish compulsory drill. In the remaining 50 land-grant institutions throughout the country, however, R. O. T. C. training is still a requisite to graduation.

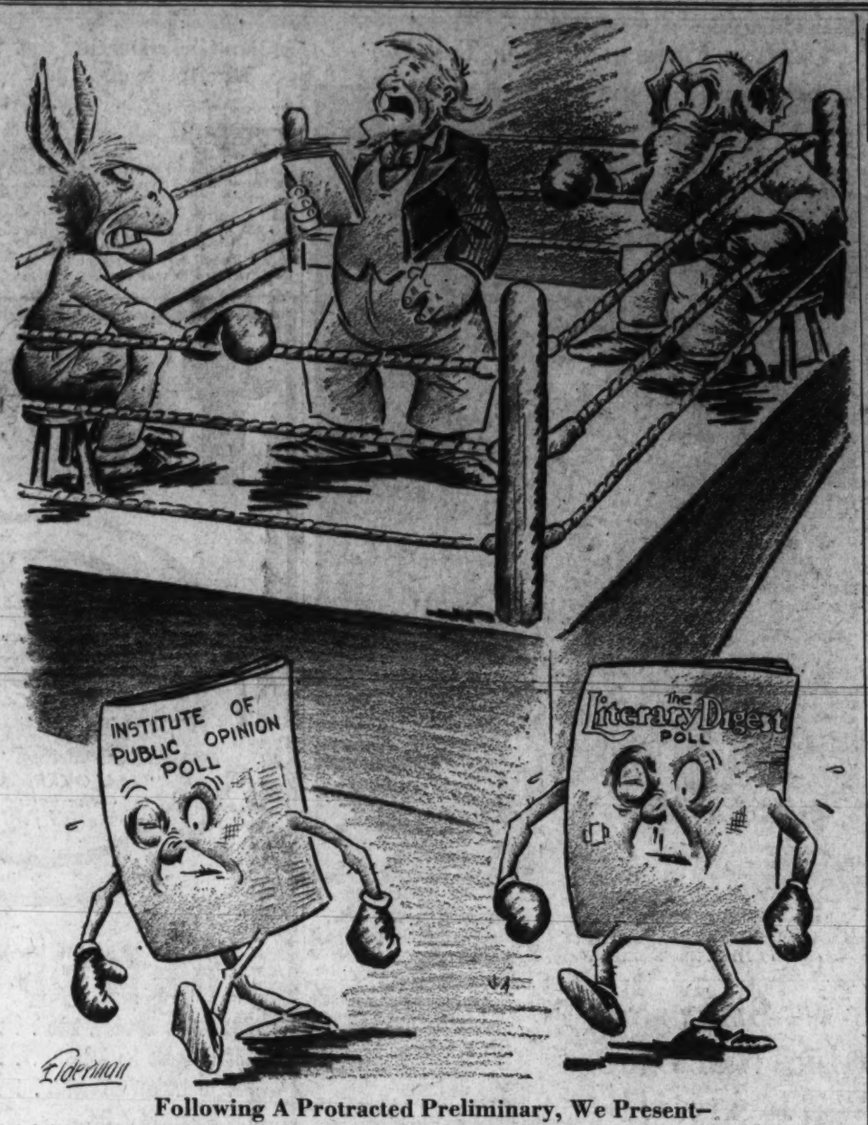
Agitation against compulsory drill is not new to the Pacific Coast. Two years ago students at the University of California refused on the grounds of conscience to enroll for required military courses and were expelled. The case ultimately reached the Supreme Court, where the university was upheld by the reasoning that the students placed themselves under the compulsion voluntarily by enrolling in the university.

Because the Oregon vote affects not only land-grant institutions but all State-supported schools, discussion there appears to have been thorough and informative. At least, the State has been showered with literature presenting both sides of the argument in full. The reaction of the electorate will not be the least interesting information resulting from today's election.

Roger Babson says within a few years nearly half the people in the United States will be living in trailers. This prediction is enough to make any straw-ballot editor break out with a cold sweat and the jitters.

A Chicago woman is suing her husband for divorce because he has beat her twice a week for 12 years. Many a matrimonial bark is wrecked on the rocks of monotony.

A Massachusetts child swallowed a police whistle. Why couldn't this have happened to a traffic cop?



Following A Protracted Preliminary, We Present—

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

FBI Function.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read the editorial entitled, "Training to Fight Crime," in The Post of October 15, and want you to know how very appreciative I am of your understanding interpretation of the work and functions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

It is indeed true that many citizens feel that the bureau's sole activity is that of apprehending some of the major criminals and after our recent success in this connection feel that perhaps we have nothing left to do. As a matter of fact, as you have pointed out, that is just one of the many phases of our work.

I am particularly grateful for your comments concerning the effect upon law enforcement which the FBI National Police Academy will have. The results of the academy already have been gratifying and it is my belief that during the years to come, it will be a tremendous force in gaining better co-operation not only between Federal and local law enforcement agencies, but between the local officers themselves. It is hoped that our endeavors to promote more effective law enforcement throughout the country will continue to merit your support and the confidence of all law-abiding citizens.

J. EDGAR HOOVER,
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation.
Washington, Oct. 15.

Theory On Starlings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the article published in The Post of October 25 in which Mr. H. A. Allard, of the Department of Agriculture, claims the pestiferous starlings are diminishing, please permit me to state that we well remember a hue and cry of a year or so ago.

Then, even the strong hand of the District law in a rather fun-provoking way went to work endeavoring to curtail the nuisance of the "chattering, jabbering, jittery mongrels of the heavens," when, lo! a faint voice from nearby Maryland whispered "Why all this fuss about the starlings when they make delicious pot pie?"

Now, it is not suggested that Mr. Allard look into Washington cooking pots for facts, but I know there are many citizens here who think it is only a just reward for these birds. RICHARD J. PAHNKE.
Washington, Oct. 30.

Small Claims Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A short time ago I noticed in your paper an article about Judge Nathan Cayton's suggestion of a small claims court. Knowing the interest of the press to better conditions, as well as seeing that justice is done, I expect that the press and the public in general will grasp this opportunity to bring quicker and less expensive justice to people with moderate means.

The people of Washington are deprived of taking part in elections as well as of representation in the law-making branch of the Nation. Why do they also have to be deprived of proper judicial action, as other cities have it?

As long as it does not need Congressional action and it will not add any additional expense to the taxpayer, why delay it any longer and impose more hardship on the citizens of the Nations' Capital?

I do not doubt, that your paper will use its influence to hasten the establishment of such a court.

ANNA LANSBURGH.
Washington, Oct. 29.

Sweepstakes Publicity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gambling, whether sweepstakes, horse racing or "number," is one of the greatest evils of the present day and the habit is growing like wildfire. Can a great newspaper like The Post deny that it is in no small degree responsible for public morals? Your publicity undoubtedly inspired hundreds of weak-minded people to plunge in the sweepstakes, which are not only unlawful, but for the most part grossly dishonest.

The Readers Digest declares that the annual "take" is between $1,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 on lottery tickets in the United States alone, and it adds that it (the system) "is unrivaled by any single racket since the liquor racket of prohibition days." Why not give both sides?

C. N. WOOD.
Washington, Oct. 29.

Cleveland's Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of November 1, "Party and Government," brings to mind an utterance of President Cleveland that ought not to be forgotten. Early in his first term I heard him make an address in Atlanta. He was introduced by Henry W. Grady, who made the remark: "He is the first President the South has had since the Civil War." Almost the first words that President Cleveland uttered when he rose to speak were: "I am not President of the South. I am the President of the whole United States."

EDMUND C. BURNETT.
Washington, Nov. 1.

Waltman Enthusiast.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To Franklyn Waltman, thanks for his fine, clear analysis of many puzzling problems.

We turn to his message as soon as headlines are read. Then editorials of The Post, which are splendid.

May we always find Franklyn Waltman on Page 2. E. C. STONER.
Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 28.

Last-Minute Comments On Election.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most serious consequences of the New Deal Administration has been the destruction and undermining of the public faith in government. This country has not seen a more disorganized and unscrupulous band of "spoilsmen" since the period following the Civil War.

Most people have the intelligence of seeing the mistakes of the Government, but they give no effective testimony of their disapproval. Why? What man will vote against a plan that gives him free food and clothing, even if his children do die in revolutions? The people say to their neighbors that it is a damnable thing, but they do nothing about it, for fear of the loss of an easy income.

What is to be done about it? It takes courage to kill a Santa Claus. But if the American people could realize the danger of the toys that he carries, they would hang different candles on their trees this Tuesday. That, though, is asking too much of a politically careless people. Only when Santa asks payment for his candies will the citizens of the United States again turn to a party that offers sound governmental principles, rather than to bundles of experiments that might any time explode into revolutions.

W. R. CRAFT, JR.
Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our people must decide whether they want a continuation of the great economic betterments wrought under the Roosevelt administration or a return to the policies that led to the terrible debacle of the late twenties.

We have boasted so long that this is the land of the free, the place where every man has a square deal, that we have come to think it is so, but it isn't so, and it never has been so. Why? Simply because the common people, the people who made America, could not buck the organized selfishness and stupidity, indifference and injustice of a country which calls itself a democracy, but which is in reality a closed corporation for the benefit of the powerful and privileged who concede nothing and take all.

E. D. VERNON.
Alexandria, Va., Oct. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Despite his claim that the election is "in the bag," there are several groups of people who will not vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

Many people now on relief will not vote for the New Deal. They have been forced to change their registrations and to display Roosevelt badges or starve.

Colored people cannot vote for the New Deal. They have not forgotten that it was the Republican Party which freed their people from slavery.

Church people cannot vote for Roosevelt. They do not forget that he told a congressional committee not to worry about the constitutionality of one of his "must" ideas but to go ahead and make it law. This violation of the President's oath to uphold and preserve the Constitution may mean that he holds the entire charter of our rights in contempt. If so, what is to prevent his abolishing the Constitution? If he does, will he also prohibit the people from worshiping God any longer?

Young people cannot vote for Roosevelt. He stands for regimentation, and regimentation means slavery—a ball-and-chain life for all and freedom for none.

Women cannot vote for Roosevelt. He is the only Presidential candidate in the history of our country who has pitted class against class, the poor against the rich, the worker against his employer and the shiftless against the thrifty. Class hatred leads to civil war, and war means wounds, agonies and deaths. In war, mothers lose their sons and wives their husbands.

FRANK A. GLENN.
Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Hoover claims that he discarded the plans which President Roosevelt is using so successfully to combat suffering. That proves that he did not know a good thing when he saw it. His record is one of pious hopeful wishing. Roosevelt's record is one of a smashing frontal attack—action.

If President Roosevelt is to be criticized it is because he has not gone far enough. The 30-hour week, higher income taxes, abolition of lynching of Negroes, a more vigorous defense of civil liberties, amendments to the Constitution to permit socially constructive legislation, Government ownership of the railroads, mines and other natural resources, these are some of the measures that a progressive administration must sponsor if it is to meet the needs of the masses.

ARISTOTLE.
Alexandria, Va., Oct. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent poll in the Howard University School of Law showed a preference for President Roosevelt by a margin of 65 per cent of the total number of votes cast, while his major opponent, Gov. Landon, tallied a third place, running far below a nominee of the minor political groups. This result is but a similar instance to many such polls as have been sponsored in colleges and universities throughout America and is indicative of the trend of the youth of America.

American youths now approaching the latter years of their undergraduate days can scarcely forget the bitter experience of plodding wearily along with many thousands of the unemployed in the breadlines before the institutions of charity throughout the land, with coat lapels turned up to hide their faces, and hats pulled down below their eyes, ashamed to reveal their identity. This was not the experience solely of the writer but of students everywhere.

President Roosevelt salvaged the wreckage of youthful America, laid waste by a decade of capitalistic monopoly sanctioned by the Republican regime. Through the Civilian Conservation Corps alone he created occupations for 1,600,000 youths who hitherto had wandered aimlessly from place to place with social morale at its lowest ebb. Through the National Youth Administration he has changed the empty dreams of 290,017 youths seeking an education into a thing of reality.

Words On Mums.

To this infrequent botanist, chrysanthemums have always seemed the roast beef of the horticultural world. Tasteful, substantial and requiring no frills, they are an altogether satisfying flower.

There is an excellent display of them now to be seen in the Government greenhouses on the southeast corner of Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street.

* * *

In effect, of course, the chrysanthemum has a name. There are Pink Dots and Majestics and Yellow Jackets but most of them have proper names borrowed from all manner of people. Each plant in the exhibit bears its cognomen on a printed card as though it were a chrysanthemum convention and each delegate were wearing his identification badge. The chrysanthemum's badges, however, have no such embossings as "Hello! I am Grand Vizier (name written in). Who are you?" Their badges are the better for it, too.

In effect, of course, hte chrysanthemums really are holding a convention. They are one of the biggest of the flower families. The ancestral home is in the Far East where they have been cultivated for 2,000 years or more. Here in this country, every one knows them—the commonest representatives being the ox-eye daisies.

The Constitution avenue exhibit, then, is one of their big get-togethers. They have put on their gayest colors and are now meeting in a hot, stuffy room. Perhaps it would be too cynical to carry the convention comparison even further and point out that each and every one is nicely potted.

Among others attending this year's sessions are Maj. Edward Bowes, Mrs. Nellie T. Ross, former Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Jardine, former Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. H. S. Firestone and Miss Ruth C. Twombly—so the cards read.

Presiding over the convention is none other than Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt. Towering over all with its 7-foot length, this chrysanthemum nods its full boll of lemon-yellow petals benignly over the assemblage. Curiously, at the foot of its stalk and almost hidden by the Vice Presidents and Secretaries clustering about Mrs. Roosevelt is a little flower identified only as Junior. And sure enough, its color is a real Harvard crimson. Only there was no oar in evidence nor any sign of a cream-colored bud named du Pont.

* * *

Chrysanthemums are developed by hybridization—that is, by crossing two strains. Once an especially beautiful flower has been obtained by this process, it is propagated by cutting shoots from it and planting them. The person who produces the flower can name it—for patent purposes and nurserymen's identification.

The Government does its own hybridizing and names its results after its favorite friends, just like anyone else. This explains the Secretary Jardine variety and many of the other names with a Washington flavor. It also explains the Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt.

This is a little disappointing because a story—shown now to have been entirely apocryphal—was going the rounds some time ago about a flower with the First Lady's name and it was fairly amusing. Perhaps it still is.

One version concerned a private chrysanthemum fancier who addressed a letter to Mrs. Roosevelt soon after she entered the White House, requesting permission to name a prize specimen after her. With his letter he inclosed a catalogue showing a picture of the flower and giving a general description of it. In due time he received a reply from one of the White House secretaries stating that Mrs. Roosevelt was flattered to have been selected for such a delightful honor and gladly gave her consent. However, the note added, it was suggested that certain of the descriptive material appearing beside the flower's picture might well be revised slightly to conform with the dignity of the position of the lady whose name was to be attached to it.

The nurseryman, puzzled, turned immediately to the catalogue and pored through the description referred to. Nothing he could find seemed in any sense undignified. He was about to ask the White House for a more precise explanation of its objections when his eye fell on a foot-note printed at the bottom of the page in small type, which read:

N. B.—This variety, readily identified by its toothed top, possesses unusual energy and requires constant attention to prevent its wandering over an entire garden plot. For highest satisfaction, stake and tie securely.

* * *

The visitors at the exhibit Sunday afternoon were a mixed lot. There were tourists and strollers and people who had become bored with the soccer game being played over by the Monument. Few, if any, of them looked as though they knew anything about flowers except that they were pretty. At that, perhaps the chrysanthemums couldn't have had a better gallery, for profession and, even more so, amateur gardeners are a cold lot.

* * * *

Two ladies of 50 or so, pretty well tied up that line at one point with their protracted "ohs" and "ahs" before every new variety.

"Oh, and do look at this one, Mary," one said, plucking at the sleeve of her companion, "how I would adore having that beside my bed smiling down into my face every morning when I woke up."

As might have been expected, the chrysanthemum in question bore on its card the name—Gen. John J. Pershing. JOHN M. CLARK.

Note To The Legion.

HARRY COLMERY, the new national commander of the American Legion, corrects an error of these dispatches in which it was regretted that the legion while resoluting against subversive alien influences and isms forgot to include nazism and fascism along with communism. The commander quotes the resolution in question and stands me down because there it stands on paper that the legion will continue its active opposition to the advocacy in America of nazism, fascism and communism, in that order.

Well, that is just fine, but I wonder if the American Legion is aware of the existence and activities in this country of a Nazi organization fostered by the German government whose object is to create disorder in the United States, and which in the present national campaign has had the effrontery to denounce the American President and recommend his defeat at the polls.

In Germany, an American who presumed to campaign against Adolf Hitler, or to criticize any policy or act of the Nazi government, would be locked up for anywhere from 6 months to 15 months without trial or even the lodgement of formal charges, and, on being brought to trial in the Nazi's own good time he would be sentenced to anywhere from one to three years in prison.

* * * *

YOU MAY SAY that what the Germans do in their own country is beside the point, and that we would only be emulating them if we were to treat theirs as they treat ours. But, in the meantime, the Nazi organization in our country is not only bothering our peace and security but mocking our hospitality and promoting an impudent abuse of our immigration laws.

If Commander Colmery will refer to the files he will discover that an important official of the Nazi government made a speech at the Nuremburg conference a little while ago in which Germans who take out American citizenship are held to be only guest citizens of this country and so owe allegiance, nevertheless, to Adolf Hitler. Then, if he will refer to the trial of the Communists who kicked up a row on a German boat in New York Harbor during the summer, he will see that a representative of the steamship line, a naturalized American, testified that, although he enjoyed American citizenship with all guarantees and liberties which citizenship implies, he still gave allegiance to Hitler. The Nazis are promoting a breed of cuckoos to make use of anybody's nest with a special preference for ours.

* * * *

ONE REASON why the legion and the rest of us more or less ignore the subversive activity of the Nazi parisites in our midst, masquerading as always in the guise of a good-will group for the promotion of warm relations, is that we simply cannot imagine such cold-blooded, treacherous gall.

It would never occur to Americans to seek German citizenship, and we would hold that anyone who did so must be crazy. We wouldn't want to hold any strings on him. We wouldn't think of meddling in their domestic politics, and when an American sailor named Simpson turned Bolo and was given three years for a feeble, single-handed effort to distribute some Communist stickers in Germany it was the unspoken but nigh-unto-unanimous judgment of our people that it served him right.

Well, that is one subversive group to which the legion might wish to turn its active opposition, and it would be well, also, to look with suspicion on those patrioteers preachers who go up and down the land hollering that anybody who doesn't go to church is, therefore, a Communist and ought to be peeled alive. The idea is truculently asserted that a good American must spend at least one hour a week in church, whereas, we all know that a man may pray just as devoutly down a well or up a pole.

And, anyway, a man needn't believe in God, man or the devil to be an American as long as he does believe in the United States Constitution and, I suppose, the articles of war.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Candid Sweepstakes Winner.

Q. Well, Mr. Wimple, how does it feel to win $150,000?—A. How would I know?

Q. You get it, don't you?—A. Only a little more than half of it; the rest is grabbed by the Government.

Q. But I thought the Government was opposed to sweepstakes and would have nothing to do with lotteries.—A. Your're right. The Government considers them illegal, vicious and highly degrading, but it doesn't object to taking its cut.

* * * *

Q. Well, now that you have won quite a sum of money, what do you intend doing with it?—A. I haven't any definite idea.

Q. Do you mean to say that you haven't any plans whatever?—A. Oh, yes, indeed, but I know I shall discard 'em in no time.

Q. Of course you intend to see that your little boy is sent to college?—A. Only for the newsreel conversations. He would rather have a barrel of ice cream and by the time he gets old enough to go to college there won't be a dime left.

Q. You have plans to take your family to Europe, of course?—A. Positively not.

Q. But all their lives they have wanted to travel, haven't they?—A. And long after these winnings are spent they will still want to travel.

* * * *

Q. How about your poor old father?—A. Shush! He hasn't heard about this. And if he does I'm going to deny it.

Q. And your wife's folks? You intend to see that they are made very comfortable and happy in their old age?—A. That's what she thinks!

* * * *

Q. This is a rather superfluous question, but I assume you will buy yourself the Home You Have Always Wanted.—A. You're nuts. I'm very happy right where I am.

Q. But, my good fellow, this is mutiny. It is almost a law that a sweepstakes winner announce his determination to build the Home He Has Always Wanted.—A. Yes, but if the builders had to wait for them to start building they would starve to death.

Q. But surely there is something you intend doing with all this money?—A. You bet there is. Do you want the truth?

Q. No.—A. Well, I'm going to give it to you nevertheless. I'm going to buy a sedan, fly a yard of mink from the radiator cap, go to Florida for the winter, take a flyer in the stock market, locate a good poker game, start doubling my bets on football results and, er, lissen . . . (He whispers.)

Q. Really! What race?—A. The fifth.

Q. But will they take that much money in one bet?

These After-Years.

Elmer Twitchell says that little did Al Smith ever expect a few years ago that he would be a guest star on a Republican program.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" has been made into a musical show and we now will hear in the years to come of the chorus girl who played in a Tom show.

George Abbott is said to have encountered only one real difficulty in making it a musical show; he hasn't been able to teach the bloodhounds to croon.

Jimmy Mollison started on an ocean hop wearing a dinner jacket. Probably on the basis of a prediction that the fog would be like soup.

Ima Dodo stood on the curb and cheered for both Landon and Roosevelt during those parades. "I did it," she says, "for fear somebody would think I wasn't in touch with the issues in this campaign."

If President Roosevelt kept a diary a la Pepys he could have concluded it after that Statue of Liberty speech, "And so to Bedloe's."

London Times Observer Cites Lack Of Social Perspective Here.

By Sir Willmott Lewis.
Washington Correspondent of the London Times.

Through the courtesy of Sir Willmott Lewis and the London Times, we are enabled to reproduce below his Election Day analysis of the American political scene as printed in London yesterday. Space considerations have necessitated a few excisions in the article, which are indicated by asterisks.

THE AMERICAN general election, with its long months of preparation and its final weeks of furious debate, has fallen into the stream of events at a time of confusion and complexity everywhere.

It has been curious to note how rarely any American speaker or writer has considered the forces of social unrest in the United States as part of a universal ferment; has seen that they are the visible sign of two great changes in modern life (the coming of democracy and nationalism, and the conquest by man of the forces of nature) in the first of which this country led the way; or has recognized the ceaseless and unescapable interaction of America and the world outside. * * *

Independence Declaration Based On Theories Of Locke.

THE AMERICAN Declaration of Independence was one of the most revolutionary of all documents. It was at once a denial of heredity and privilege, an assertion of the rights of the individual man, and a proclamation that no people should ever abandon its fate to any authority, outward or inward, which it could not control. Thomas Jefferson, who wrote it, took all the world and all time for his province, but the makers of the Constitution had their feet planted on the solid ground of their own place and generation. They did not think in terms of political perfection, because they knew that if such a thing could be conceived, it could exist only in relation to a particular set of conditions, and could last only if those conditions were perpetuated. For all that, they are built more enduringly than some of the wisest of them dared to hope.

They accepted and applied the idea of Locke, that the powers of government should be divided according to their nature, and not according to any division of classes; they provided that these powers should be checked and balanced against each other, and they ordained that all civil authority should be subject to the popular will. But they also accepted as indisputable what Charles Beard calls "the concept that the fundamental private rights of property are anterior to government and morally beyond the reach of popular majorities." They set their great organic act, therefore, as a buttress against attacks on property, and they so contrived their work that the popular will—supreme though it were over all civil authority—should also be subject to restriction. It was as though they said that the people is and must perforce be the lawgiver, but the lawgiver must not be above the law, must not be released into a field of action where it would find no barrier but its own judgment of expediency.

Democracy, then, was to be armed not only against despotism, against aristocracy and kingship, but against its own weakness and excess. The sole unhampered concession made to "the people" was the provision that the House of Representatives should be elected by popular vote. The choice of a President was confided to an electoral college, whose members should be selected by ballot, but who then should exert their independent judgment. The Senate was to be chosen by the Legislatures of the various States, a method expected to provide "a portion of enlightened citizens," as Madison said, likely "to seasonably interpose against tumultuous councils." And the Constitution itself was to remain unchangeable, save by an amending process ultimately involving the consent of three-fourths of the States. Add to this that, whether by design of the founders or not, the judiciary has become supreme over all other branches of government in matters relating to the rights of persons and property, and the picture is finished.

Constitution Divides Voters And Property Owners.

IT WOULD BE wearisome to relate the changes which have taken place in the last century and a half. Pour them into an alembic, and you may distil out of them this generalization: that whereas the fundamental division of powers in the Constitution of the United States is still what Arthur Twining Hadley said it was, between voters on the one hand and property owners on the other, the strength of the voters has been steadily enlarged. The forces of democracy on one side (represented by the Executive and the Legislature) are still set over against the forces of property on the other, with the judiciary as arbiter between them; but the devices which withdrew the Presidency and the Senate from popular choice have broken down. The members of the electoral college today are party dummies and no more, stripped of all power of independent choice; and an amendment in 1913 decreed the direct election of Senators, leaving the Senate as much exposed to the danger of "tumultuous councils" as the House of Representatives. And, in 1913 also, perhaps most fateful of all, an amendment was written into the Constitution empowering the imposition of an income tax, with the result that for the first time a pattern of the national income and its distribution was there for all to see, and new decisions in policy became imperative as social conditions were revealed in figures. Only the Supreme Court is left today to check those "levelling doctrines" of democracy which so deeply alarmed the founding fathers.

Why was it that the country waited so long for the setting in of the period of constitutional change? From 1804 to 1913 the formal rules of the organic act remained untouched, save for the three amendments born of the agony of civil war. Why had that been impossible for 109 years which began in 1913? One event above all explains the phenomenon, and transformed the United States—the closing of the frontier in 1890. In that year the superintendent of the census announced that, in effect, there remained no more free cultivable land. The effect, political and social, was immense and almost immediate.

The story has not yet been told, and will perhaps never be fully told, of all that the American frontier meant to the United States and to Europe. The student who lifts himself high enough above the tract of historic time called the nineteenth century will note, among the deepest markings of its design, the introduction into human life of the industrial system, the use of power other than manual for manufacturing on a large scale; the stimulus this gave to an astonishing growth in population wherever the system was introduced; the greater mobility of that population made possible by improved machinery and transportation, and the impulse toward migration which was one of the consequences of the early severities of industrialism. All this affected Europe first, and cruelly; but with the acquirement by the United States of the great Mississippi Valley the New World was able in some measure to redress the social balance of the Old. For those moved to sullen resentment by the social cruelties and recurrent crises of the early years of the Industrial Revolution there was revealed a paradise of natural wealth and free opportunity such as had never before existed.

They could, and did, migrate to the new land, and they came first from countries where pressure of population was heaviest because the soil was either occupied or was withheld from entry by the existence of great landed estates. Thus it was that the movement set in first and most heavily from the United Kingdom and Ireland, to be later—after 1848—powerfully reinforced from Germany. The first wave was of men seeking equality in access to the land, the second of men who sought equality before the law. They entered, they took up land, they became citizens, and they played their tremendous part in the building of America. There is a sense in which the United States is every European's "second country," for something of the genius, the native energy and the modes of thought and being of every European people has been woven into the texture of American life. This country was, while the frontier lasted, in some measure and degree the safety valve of Europe.

Nation Faces Problem With Frontier Vanished.

NO STUDENT of the Industrial Revolution as a determinant of the great America-ward migration of the nineteenth century can help asking a question. Counted in terms of suffering and violent social change, what greater price than they demonstrably have paid would have been exacted of the commercial countries of Europe if there had been no American frontier? The question can not be answered, and is not worth asking unless it leads to another: What price, in social change and perhaps in suffering, must the United States pay for its future industrial development now that there is no frontier?

The day came, in 1890, when there was no more frontier. Then, almost over-night, the character of immigration changed; then it was that the flood from northern and north-eastern Europe stopped, and a tide of humanity from central, southern and eastern Europe began to run. The millions it brought to these shores found no free, cultivable land awaiting them. They banked up, as they were forced to do, behind walls of the great cities, there to form that reservoir of cheap labor upon which the furiously growing industrialism of the United States depended. Now that flow has been stopped by law; now, for the first time in the history of the Republic, more people leave than enter the United States in any one year; now at last there is an end of the Jeffersonian dream of a society of enlightened and philosophic farmers, and in its place is set a predominantly commercialized country, doomed to face the special problems which urban concentration and industrialization bring, and with no westward open spaces to invite the adventurous and absorb the discontented.

The challenge is not less grave, demands no less courage in response, than did those of 1776 and the Civil War. For it finds the three great component groups of the country in a state of imbalance, of disequilibrium. In one of these must be set all who are interested in finance, trade and industry; in another those who own or work agricultural land; and in the last those who render transport and factory labor. If with the first be counted the "white collar" workers, and those engaged in dependent service occupations, the three groups are roughly equal in numbers. But the first, which for 60 years has been predominant, suffered with the depression a tremendous loss of public confidence and esteem; the agricultural group is for various reasons now dependent, and likely over a long future to be dependent, upon governmental assistance; and the labor group is still largely unorganized. Even when the position is thus stated, the factors of sparseness of population and vast natural resources still leave the American position relatively the most favorable on earth. But when an effective balance is lacking, the demand for readjustment of the social order is unescapable.

It is this demand which is the stuff of the present election, and it is part of the American system that it should be addressed to the aspirants to the office of President.* * *

Centralization Demands Growing On Every Hand.

THERE IS little doubt that for the last three years the American people have, as Professor Lindsay Rogers says, relied on the personal power of the President, and there is abundant evidence that this reliance will be continued. Today, as never before, there is a public awareness of the fact that while the interdependence of the people living in the States of the Federal Union grows with every day, the legal notion of State sovereignty tends to set them apart, and this awareness is strengthened by the belief that the bitterest enemies of social control are financial interests which employ the doctrine of State sovereignty to prevent it. It is clear that centralization must be costly, but the mass seems to desire it regardless of cost, while the "conservative" minority resists it regardless of necessity.

The fact is that the American conservative has never worked out his own philosophy, or (which is more likely) has been content to find it in those provisions of the Constitution which give the property holder in this country so immensely strong a theoretic position. There is a natural, as distinct from a political conservatism, which is one of the most familiar attributes of all peoples, born of the power men have to adapt themselves to their surroundings, and tending to make custom and use more tolerable than innovation. In this sense the American people is still conservative. But political conservatism, even though it takes its rise in this tendency, must be more than a mere validation of what has been. It must ask incessantly what should be conserved, and why? It must be positive, not negative; a belief, not a mere acceptance. It is the weakness of the American conservative that he never asks questions.

If he did, he would perceive that, in his country more than most, political theory has lagged behind industrial progress, and that it profits him not at all to protest in the name of legality against the makeshift remedies invented to prevent breakdown. He should see that slowly, but surely the forces of democracy in America have broken away from the form of government originally contrived to limit their power, and that the end is not yet. The cry today is that the predominance of privilege must cease, and the danger today is that the predominance of mere numbers may take its place.

The answer lies, not in the Constitution, but outside it. Politics is not a series of abstractions set down on paper, but a force acting upon the very stuff of life itself.

Sacred Egoism

Accolade To Hungary.

EUROPEAN DICTATORS may have done away with free elections; they still find it necessary to conduct campaigns.

Only with this in mind can Mussolini's speech at Milan be seen in proper perspective. For it was not merely a statement of policy; it was also a campaign document designed to keep up the fighting spirit of the Blackshirts and reconcile the Italian people to tightening their belts a little further.

As such it was inevitably belligerent. The gigantic rearmament program upon which Italy has embarked will not be paid for out of the surplus in the exchequer; there is no such surplus, only a huge and mounting deficit whose size has carefully been kept from the Italian people and the outside world. Nor will it be financed out of the profits to be derived from the exploitations of Ethiopia. That colony will, for years, constitute a liability rather than an asset.

The payment for the guns, airplanes, tanks and battleships which Mussolini is accumulating will have to come out of the hides of the Italian people themselves. He finds it necessary, therefore, to persuade them to renewed acquiescence. And since there already exists considerable anti-British feeling in Italy, as a result of British leadership in the League's campaign against the Fascist conquest of Ethiopia, it is to Great Britain to whom the warning of Italy's readiness to fight in defense of its interests is directed.

Yet this is not to be taken too seriously. The bayonet pointed in the direction of London was wreathed in olive branches. Obviously nothing would please the Duce more than the completion of that "direct, rapid and complete understanding" with Great Britain that he now urges. For it is no doubt clear to him that continued British antagonism constitutes a real threat to Italy. Mussolini may have won the first round, in the struggle with the British Empire; that does not necessarily mean the final victory will be his. And if no direct antagonisms develop between the two countries in the future, the fact that Great Britain, whose resources are infinitely greater than are Italy's, is proceeding apace to build up its armaments suggests that if the two nations should be once more at swords' points, as they were last year, the British may not be frightened off again.

* * * *

BUT A MODUS VIVENDI with Great Britain is desired by Italy for reasons that have no direct relationship to dangerous tensions existing in the Mediterranean and the arms race that these have given rise to. British neutrality, if not its active cooperation, is needed by Italy in furtherance of its policies on the European continent.

What these policies are are not clear in every particular. Recent developments in Spain and Austria have tended to bring Italy and Germany together. How firmly established or, conversely, how fragile this new combination is remains to be seen. Many believe that it constitutes, in effect, an alliance between the Nazi and Fascist dictatorships. It is possible to believe, however, in view of the clash of interests between Germany and Italy in southeastern Europe and the fact that the settlement regarding Austria may prove to be only a truce, that the Berlin agreement is by no means as far-reaching as it seems. Yet the Milan speech of the Duce does bring into rather sharp focus one line of joint action by the two nations which might prove of the utmost significance.

This has to do with Hungary, and by virtue of that fact with Hungary's neighbors of the Little Entente. At Milan Mussolini declared:

"Until justice shall be rendered to Hungary there cannot be a definite systematization of interest in the Danubian basin. Hungary is a truly great but disabled veteran. Four million Magyars live beyond her present borders. By desiring to follow the dictate of too abstract justice one fell into injustice perhaps greater."

And he significantly added:

"There will perhaps come soon a solemn occasion wherein the sentiments of the Italian people will find public, clamorous manifestation."

* * * *

WHAT CAN THIS MEAN? From the Magyar point of view, which Mussolini has consistently supported for years, justice can only be done Hungary if it is restored to its former size. This would have to be at the expense of the Little Entente powers—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—which contain wtihin their borders areas that were once Hungarian and that still harbor millions of Magyars. As it happens, none of these nations is prepared to give up voluntarily an inch of its territory.

To one of these small powers—Yugoslavia—Mussolini held out an olive branch. Relations between that country and Italy, he said, were greatly improved. The necessary "moral, political and economic conditions" now exist for "putting relations between these two countries on a new basis of true and concrete friendship." But the Duce was silent with respect to Yugoslavia's partners—Rumania and Czechoslovakia. Can it be that one aspect of the German-Italian deal made at Berchtesgaden is that Italy is prepared to give Germany a free hand in Czechoslovakia if, in return, Hungary can satisfy part of its irredentist ambitions at the expense of that same country?

This might seem, at first glance, far-fetched. A German or a combined German-Magyar attack on Czechoslovakia would blow European peace sky high. It would seem to involve Czechoslovakia's allies, France, Russia, Rumania (whose monarch has just completed a friendly visit to Prague) and Yugoslavia. Yet with France cut off from giving direct aid to the Czechs, with Great Britain sullenly isolationist so far as Central Europe is concerned, a quick decisive move by Germany into the Bohemian area and of Hungary into Slovakia, particularly if made with Italian connivance and support, is not outside the realm of possibility.

In any case, whether real or fantastic, the possibility is thrown into bold relief by Mussolini's statement. It may be only a bluff for bargaining purposes. But it may actually cloak a real aim soon to be exposed by events. Now, as heretofore, there is no telling where the pursuit of "sacro egoismo" may lead Italy's twentieth-century Caesar.

Election Day

By William Lyon Phelps

Uncertainty As Of 1916.

In one respect this Presidential election is the most exciting since that of exactly 20 years ago, the election of 1916. It is the most exciting because it is the only one since 1916 when the result is really uncertain. It was certain that in 1920 Harding would be elected; that in 1924 Coolidge would be elected; that in 1928 Hoover would be elected; that in 1932 Roosevelt would be elected.

But just as in 1916 the voters went to the polls in complete uncertainty as to the outcome, so in the same frame of mind they are voting today.

It may seem strange, in elections decided by ballot, with so many millions voting, and over so wide an area of space, that the result is known weeks and weeks beforehand. Yet such is usually the case.

Only at very rare intervals is there an "upset." The last one was nearly 50 years ago—the election of 1888. Cleveland was supposed to have the best chance for re-election, yet Harrison won.

In general, the event is foreseen, and usually has been long before there was any Literary Digest preliminary balloting.

It's Not What the Figures Show, But How You Interpret Them

On Basis of Institute's Forecasts, Roosevelt's Margin of Victory Depends Mainly on Method Used in Prediction.

By George Gallup.

New York, Nov. 2.—While the final Presidential poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published in Sunday's Washington Post, indicates that President Roosevelt will receive a minimum of 315 electoral votes, the permutations and combinations involved in calculating his maximum electoral vote are enough to delight the most figure-loving political analyst.

One combination would give the President 366 electoral votes, another 477, another as high as 519, depending on how a number of close or border-line States are assigned.

The minimum of 315 is what Roosevelt would receive from the States which are listed in the accompanying table as safely Democratic, that is, where the major party vote in the poll is 53 per cent or more for the President. The institute classes these 31 States as "sure" for Roosevelt because it believes that last-minute changes would not be likely to alter his lead there by as much as 3 per cent.

Last minute developments might, however, erase a lead of 1 or 2 per cent. Hence the States where either candidate is leading by 2 per cent or less are classed by the institute as too close for positive prediction.

1. If the President carries the 31 sure States, plus the 4 borderline States where the Democratic vote is 52 per cent—Ohio, Indiana, Wyoming and West Virginia—he would have 366 electoral votes.

2. If he carries the same States, plus the 4 listed above, plus the 5 where the Democratic vote is 51 per cent—Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Michigan, Iowa and Illinois—he would have 477 electoral votes, or 5 more than in 1932.

3. If he carries all the "sure" Democratic States and all the "leaning Democratic" States, plus the two States where the vote is 50-50—Connecticut and Rhode Island—he would have 489.

4. Finally, if in addition to all these States, he carries the three where Gov. Landon now leads by a slight margin of 52 per cent—Kansas, Massachusetts and South Dakota—he would have 519.

If the Republican candidate carries the three safely Republican States, plus the three States leaning Republican, plus the two States on the 50-50 line, plus all of the nine States leaning Democratic in the poll, he would have 216 electoral votes—50 short of the necessary 266.

To obtain these 50 he would have to invade President Roosevelt's sure column to carry New York, with 47 electoral votes, and Delaware with 3.

Clearly New York may be the key State in the election.

The instiute poll shows the President receiving 54 per cent of the major party vote in New York to 46 for Landon. The poll showed a sharp Democratic upswing in New York during the last two weeks. Part of the increase is undoubtedly due to the announcement that Lemke's name will not appear on the ballot there Electoin Day. Since Lemke has been drawing more votes from Roosevelt than from Landon, it follows that more returned to Roosevelt when it was learned that Lemke's name would be thrown off the ballot.

The total vote for the Nation in the poll as reported yesterday gave President Roosevelt 55.7 per cent of the major party vote (minor parties eliminated) to 44.3 per cent for Gov. Landon. With minor parties included, the total popular vote was: Roosevelt, 53.8 per cent; Landon, 42.8 per cent; other candidates, 3.4 per cent.

Strike Ties Up Atlantic Liner On East Coast

U. S. Inquiry Is Adjourned After Union Leaders Quit Meeting.

avert the strike Thursday night, said he had hopes of getting coastwise freight operators and seagoing unions into another conference soon.

Coast ports, from San Diego to Seattle, remained quiet in contrast to riots and bloodshed which characterized the bitter 1934 maritime strike, in which more than a dozen were killed.

Pickets and extra police were on duty, but no violence was reported.

Striking seamen in Houston, Tex., prevented longeshoremen from passing picket lines, and Port Arthur and Galveston reported shipping delays due to walkouts. The Gulf district of the Maritime Federation was called to meet at Galveston to attempt to draw longeshoremen and other maritime groups into the strike.

Six West Coast freighters were caught in a strike of sailors and longshoremen in Baltimore, where the International Seamen's Union claimed 16 other vessels were also held.

Pickets Arrested.

Seven pickets were arrested at Philadelphia docks after Mayor S. Davis Wilson had declared the dockworkers strike there illegal.

In a proclamation the mayor ordered the arrest of anyone who attempted to stop "the free flow of commerce."

In Boston, striking "hands" of two boats already tied up there announced determination to tie up the port. The strike spread to nearby Charlestown, Mass., where the crew of the Oriole Line's freighter, Quaker City, quit work and the boat failed to sail on schedule.

Pickets at Norfolk.

The crew of the Quaker Line ship, San Vincente, established a picket line at the Norfolk, Va., terminals where the ship is moored. The crew was discharged and paid off by order of the United States shipping commissioner after officers charged insubordination.

Strike threats on the southeastern waterfront were withdrawn as International Longshoremen's Union officials announced approximately 10,000 workers in ports from Wilmington, N. C., to Tampa, Fla., would get pay increases averaging 20 per cent.

The Coast Guard ordered the cutter Talapoosa to carry the mails in Alaskan waters because of what officials described as "difficulties" in mail transportation there resulting from the maritime strike.

Mrs. Lucia Mead Dies; Was Peace Advocate

Boston, Nov. 2 (AP).—Funeral services for Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, 81, widely known woman's suffrage leader and peace advocate, will be held Wednesday in the First Church (Unitarian) here, with the Rev. Charles E. Park officiating. Cremation will follow at Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. Mrs. Mead died yesterday at her home in Brookline.

Mrs. Mead was the author of "Memoirs of a Millionaire," "To Whom Much Is Given," "Milton's England," "The New Internationalism," "Swords and Ploughshares" and "Law of War."

Phobia Cure Too Complete

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—After suffering for seven yeasr from agoraphobia—a morbid fear of open spaces—John Hewins Kern was cured, but the cure today seemed to be too complete. His wife reported to police he had been missing since last week.

Security Board Flatly Denies 'Tag' Charges

Official Statement Brands Hamilton Claims as 'Utterly False.'

benefit rights," the board said in a statement.

Officials also hastened to refute statements that they plan to use fingerprints or personal photographs of workers for the identification of beneficiaries under the act, they said this intention was "implied" in Gov. Landon's speech in St. Louis Saturday.

"The board has on repeated occasions in the past nine months denied such intentions everytime rumors, claims or questions about these false statements have been brought to it," their statement read.

Ever since pay roll taxes under the Social Security act, became a central campaign issue both the board and Democratic candidates have been busy answering charges that every worker will be hit by pay envelope deductions.

Only last week the board explained to workers that "what you get from the Government plan will always be more than you have paid in taxes and usually more than you can get for yourself by putting away the same amount of money each week in some other way."

Earlier the board had called on the Justice Department to investigate the source of posters, tacked up in places of employment in at least six States, indicating the board had ordered wage reductions in connection with the social security act, effective January 1.

Charging a campaign by employers allegedly to misrepresent the act, "through pay envelope pressure," Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, also had ordered an investigation by his Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

Reports that the "pay envelope" posters were making inroads on the worker vote has led Democratic candidates on the stump to concentrate in the last few days on "answers" to the charges before the voters go to the polls.

The Social Security Board reiterated yesterday that it "is a nonpartisan body and it has no wish to participate in political discussions."

"The board would, however, be negligent in its duty as the administrator of a Federal law if it permitted to go unchallenged even for a day this wholly false statement," it added.

Townsend Says Act Fraud.

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, criticized the social security act today as a "fraud" in a statement directed against President Roosevelt.

"Mr. Roosevelt should be defeated," the doctor said in the statement, issued from his National Recovery Plan headquarters, "if for no other reason alone than the greatest single fraud ever perpetrated on the American people under the guise of well-meant legislation and principle."

Townsend charged that the "social security act puts a burden on the working people and does not put money in circulation—it hoards it away in Washington to be spent by politicians."

He contrasted the act to his own national recovery plan, which would provide a 2 per cent tax on all transactions, the funds to be used for pensions to all persons over 60.

"The transactions tax is an equitable tax," Townsend said. "It taxes every citizen in equal proportion, whether he makes $1,000 or $1,000,000 a year. Compare this with a 3 per cent pay roll tax on incomes of $3,000 a year and under."

1936 Campaign On 'Low Level,' Thomas Avers

Says Candidates Express Equal Devotion for Profit System.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, concluded his campaign tonight urging the electorate "not to join a kind of herd stampede and act like men who would rather ride on a band wagon to hell than build a road to heaven."

Speaking over a national network, he declared that "the campaign in general has been on a disgracefully low level of discussion of issues."

"The one clear thing," he said, "is that both major parties and their candidates have expressed an equal devotion to that profit system in which are the roots of war and exploitation. They only differ about the method of prolonging it. • • •

"Your vote will not settle that issue tomorrow, but a Socialist vote is one way to make plain your desires for the next four years."

Browder Assails Landon.

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Earl Browder, Communist Presidential candidate, concluded his campaign tonight at a party rally in Madison Square Garden with a broadside against "the camp of reaction and fascism around Landon and the Republican banner" and the envisionment of a national Farmer-Labor party.

Speaking to the Garden audience and over a national network, he declared that the charge of communism against President Roosevelt "is the infallible sign of the madness of fascism."

"Everywhere that democracy has been destroyed," he asserted, "it has been done under the smoke-screen of the red scare. It is known today to all intelligent Americans that a victory for Landon will be cheered by every reactionary force in our country and throughout the whole world."

"For the Communist Party," he said, "tonight is not the end of our campaign. It is only the beginning of a new campaign to build and strengthen the Communist Party in order that we can give our full strength and loyalty • • • to the Farmer-Labor Party."

Prosecution Promised.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 2.—In an election eve denunciation of steel and coal companies which he said were trying to coerce employes into voting for Gov. Landon, Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, asserted tonight they would be prosecuted "to the full extent of the law."

Making a final bid for Pennsylvania's big bloc of electoral votes, Guffey accused Republican leaders and the Manufacturers Association of the State of Pennsylvania with causing a "deceitful message" about taxes imposed by the social security act to be placed in workers' pay envelopes.

He contended also that "some of our steel companies in the western part of the State and some of the coal companies in and around Wilkes-Barre" had tried to coerce their employes for Landon.

He said the public could assume that Gov. Landon wants "to save America for the Joe Grundys, the Mellons and the Pews—big business and big money."

Arlington Vote Total Forecast At Over 6,500

With one of the most spirited campaigns closed, and both parties claiming the county, citizens at sunrise today march to the polls, and it is predicted that the vote will exceed 6,500.

Republican Chairman Grayson Ahalt stated last night that every precinct is well organized and provisions have been made for automobiles to take voters to the polls.

Democratic Chairman Charles R. Fenwick, declared that conditions have never been brighter in Arlington County for a great victory for his party.

The polls will open at 6:31 a. m. and close at 4:55 p. m. All banks in the county will be closed.

Nomination of officers and directors will be the principal business to come before the meeting of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department tomorrow night at 8. Arthur C. Stickley, president is being urged to accept re-election.

The Woman's Club of Lyon Village will meet tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. W. Martin, 2717 Franklin road.

W. A. C. class, Ballston Christian Church, will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Genevieve Hartung, 2100 Thirty-first place, southeast Washington.

Arlington branch of National Association of Letter Carriers, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Clarendon Community Center.

Bids for the construction of the Junior High School in Arlington County will be received and opened in the office of County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, November 17 at 2 o'clock.

Superintendent Kemp announces that plans and specifications may be obtained from the office of R. V. Long, State architect, at Richmond.

The Arlington County Health Department announces that the monthly chest clinic for the county will be open November 12 in the Jefferson Health Center, on South Twenty-third street, Aurora Hills. Dr. H. A. Latane, of Alexandria, will be in charge.

The tuberculin test will be given children, and chest examinations given adults. Those presenting themselves at this clinic are requested to see their family physician first and bring a note from him.

The semiannual orthopedic clinic will be held in the Clarendon Health Center, 1119 North Hudson street, Arlington, November 15 from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Dr. D. M. Faulkner, of Richmond, will be in charge.

Any cases of bone deformity in either adults or children will be seen.

Rev. Smith and 3 Aids Arrested in Louisiana

New Orleans, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, self-styled head of the late Huey P. Long's "share the wealth" movement, was arrested and jailed with three companions tonight after he had made an address here.

Smith was arrested with his secretary, Preston Delcazal, and Henry and Herman Grundmeyer, friends, as the four sat in Smith's room in a local hotel, Delcazal declared.

Police, questioned concerning Smith's arrest, refused comment.

Delcazal, who said he was paroled a few minutes after the four men were jailed, declared Smith and the Grundmeyers refused the paroles and remained in a cell in the Fourth Precinct station. Delcazal said he did not know who had arranged for his release.

Virginia Liquor Stores Closed on Election Day

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—State liquor stores in all sections of the Commonwealth must remain closed all day tomorrow. This is ordained under a special provision of Virginia's alcoholic beverage control act.

"On some holidays the ABC stores may stay open," a board spokesman said. "But on Election Day, never."

Mine to Reopen.

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 2.—Operations at the Chaplin Colleries mine on Scott Run will be resumed in ten days, it was announced today. The mine has been idle since it went into receivership. It formerly employed between 300 and 400 men.

Engine Backfires, 2 Hurt, Shop Burns

The engine backfired, causing an explosion that hurled Ursul across his shop and ignited his clothing.

The blacksmith plunged into a barrel, thinking it contained water. It was empty and he became wedged inside, his clothes still burning.

Tipping the barrel on its side, Ursul struggled out and plunged into a water trough, quenching the flames.

Then he found his shop assistant wandering about, stunned by the explosion, and the shop in flames. The fire was put out with little damage.

Prince Georges G. O. P. Leaders See Close Race

Majority of Only 2,000 for Roosevelt Is Predicted; Foes Confident.

Outnumbered by 7,000 votes, according to registration figures, Republicans in Prince Georges County yesterday predicted they would hold the Democratic majority down to 2,000 in the elections today.

Democratic leaders, on the other hand, estimated a majority for their party of from 3,000 to 5,000.

Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, of Hyattsville, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Prince Georges County, declared the "Republican prospects in Prince Georges County are the best in years."

He predicted Roosevelt would not get a 2,000 majority out of the 31,000 voters in the county.

"I think there will be a landslide for Roosevelt and the whole Democratic ticket."

Frank Smith, secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee for Prince Georges County, expressed belief the Democratic majority would exceed 4,000. In 1932 the majority for Roosevelt was approximately 5,000.

In addition to the national nominees, both parties have two local candidates in the field.

Stephen W. Gambrill, incumbent Democratic Representative from the Fifth Maryland District, is opposed by Roscoe C. Rowe. The other contest is between Ralph W. Powers (Democrat), and Sherman Hollingsworth (Republican), candidates for the Maryland House of Delegates.

Polls will open at 7 a. m. and close at 7 p. m. Persons in the polling booths at closing time will be eligible to vote, it has been ruled by State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor.

The Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club will sponsor a dance at the Beaver Dam Country Club Saturday to raise funds for a summer camp for undeprivileged children.

The club proposes to establish a camp somewhere on the Chesapeake Bay. Children of parents who are unable to afford vacations for them will be privileged to spend several weeks at the resort.

Since the beginning of the campaign to raise funds for the project last July, close to $1,000 has been obtained through a lawn fete and a donkey baseball game.

Steiwer, Ill in Denver, Spends a Restful Day

Denver, Nov. 2 (AP).—Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, stricken ill here Sunday, spent a restful day in St. Joseph's Hospital today.

Hospital attaches said Senator Steiwer is suffering from gall bladder trouble probably aggravated by exertion in his campaign on behalf of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee.

Mrs. Steiwer flew here from Washington today.

New Theater Bombings Injure 12 in New York

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Patrons of five Times Square picture theaters were driven into the street tonight by exploding tear gas bombs in the second series of bombings within four days.

Twelve patrons were injured, one seriously, in tonight's outburst of violence, attributed to labor troubles.

D. C. Aids Study Abattoir Rules At Baltimore

Report Will Be Made in Case of Gobel Plant Plans for Extension.

A special committee of District officials yesterday went to Baltimore to study the Maryland city's method of regulating abattoirs before determining a recommendation regarding the Adolf Gobel plant near Benning road and Kenilworth avenue northeast.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, chairman of the committee, declined to comment on the findings, but said that a meeting will be held tomorrow and a report probably will be made to the Commissioners shortly thereafter.

Gobel has applied for a building permit to extend an existing abattoir. The Commissioners became interested after Secretary Ickes had protested that the slaughter house is too close to a PWA low-cost housing development.

Meanwhile, the corporation counsel's office is preparing an answer to a demurrer of the Gobel company in District Supreme Court. A hearing is scheduled for tomorrow.

Members of the District committee, besides Dr. Ruhland, are Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel; Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection; Augustus D. Black, of the sewer department, and John J. Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., to Marry Miss Ethel du Pont; Formal Announcement Will Be Made After Election

Son of President, Now in Senior Year at Harvard, and Daughter of New Deal Foe May Not Wed Before His Graduation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 2.—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Ethel du Pont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont, of Philadelphia and Wilmington, to Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., third son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, will be made shortly after the election.

The projected union between the President's son and the daughter of one of the leading "economic royalists" and foes of the New Deal, although frequently rumored, has not been formally announced.

It is said the announcement was withheld by the parents of the bride-to-be, on the request of the President, who asked that it not be made until the election was over.

The romance began several years ago and the engagement was rumored as early as 1934, when young Franklin Roosevelt was among the hundreds of guests who attended Miss du Pont's debut, a dinner dance given at the home of her parents. The rumor gained new credence during the Christmas holidays that year, when she was among the ten young girls entertained as week-end guests at the White House, at the time the President's sons were hosts at a dance attended by 300 of the younger set of Washington. The report of the engagement at that time, however, was consistently denied.

Miss du Pont was graduated from Ethel Walker School at Simsbury, Conn., the spring before she was presented to society, and is popular in New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington. Last March, on her return from Europe, she was met by the President's son, who flew out to her ship aboard a Coast Guard plane. Later she was his guest at Harvard's Hasty Pudding Club ball.

Mr. Roosevelt now is in his senior year at Harvard and it is probable the marriage will not take place until after his graduation from the university.

MISS ETHEL DU PONT.

U. S. Delegates Sail Saturday For Conference

Mrs. Robbins Named Special Assistant for Parley At Buenos Aires.

When the liner American Legion sails from New York on Saturday, a majority of the American delegates to the Pan American Conference will be aboard. The conference is taking place next month in Buenos Aires.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, widow of the former Minister to Canada, has been appointed special assistant to the delegates. She is one of that group of enterprising Washington women, including Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Truxton Beale, who have always taken an active interest in politics.

Others going are Mrs. Richard Southgate, wife of the Chief Protocol; Mrs. Sumner Welles, who will accompany her husband, the Assistant Secretary of State; Miss Marjorie Whiteman and Mr. Robert Joyce, of the State Department. Mr. and Mrs. Joyce have been occupying the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding at 2601 Thirtieth street. Mrs. Joyce will remains in this country, but is planning a trip to South Carolina or California—she has not decided which.

And, of course, as has been announced before, Mrs. Cordell Hull will accompany her husband, the Secretary of State, who heads the American delegation. They will also sail on Saturday on the American Legion.

Hammerbachers To Return Nov. 15

Newlyweds Plan to Live in Bethesda.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Walter Hammerbacher, who were married October 24 at the rectory of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, will return November 15 from a motor trip to Canada. They will live at 4413 Highland avenue, Bethesda.

Mrs. Hammerbacher was formerly Miss Alma Catherine Cullinan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cullinan, of Washington. Mr. Hammerbacher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hamerbacher, also of this city.

Miss Phillips Picks Nov. 25

She Will Become Bride of Mr. Francis Hoffheins on That Date

Miss Frances Virginia Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Edward Phillips, of Chevy Chase, has chosen Wednesday, November 25, as the date of her marriage to Mr. Francis Mervin Hoffheins, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hoffheins, of Washington. The ceremony will take place at 8:30 o'clock at the Congressional Country Club with the Rev. Edward O. Clark, of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, officiating, and Dr. Charles E. Wehler, of Frederick, Md., assisting.

Miss Elizabeth Owens will be maid of honor, and the bride's other attendants will be Miss Mary Lee Owens, Miss Mary Louise Parks, Miss Priscilla Wrightson and Miss Helene McLachlen.

Mr. Hoffheins will have Mr. William Ellenberger as best man, and the ushers will include Mr. David Rauch, Mr. Alfred Owens, Mr. Quincy Owens and Mr. Marshall Homer. A reception at the club will follow the ceremony.

Miss Phillips is a graduate of Immaculate Seminary and has been active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mr. Hoffheins received his degree in Chemical Engineering from George Washington University. He is a member of Theta Tau Fraternity and is a vice president of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is an engineer at the National Bureau of Standards.

Mrs. Kondrup, Wed 50 Years, Honored

Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, wife of one of the newly appointed commissioners of patents, entertained a small group of friends at luncheon yesterday at the Westchester Apartments in compliment to Mrs. Johan Kondrup, who, with Mr. Kondrup, observes tomorrow her fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Kondrup long has been prominent in the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Political Study Club and the Housekeepers Alliance, of which she has been treasurer since 1921. She and Mr. Kondrup have lived at 3012 Cambridge street, Georgetown, for 43 years and both are natives of Washington.

Tomorrow night their daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Peckham, and Mr. Peckham will entertain at a large reception in their honor. Mrs. Carl Sparrwardt, of Philadelphia, a friend of many years standing, who is here for the occasion, was among the guests yesterday. Others included were Mrs. Peckham, Mrs. Paul Blair, Mrs. Terrell, Mrs. B. W. Martin and Miss Jean McGarraghy.

Mrs. Van Arsdale is leaving this week-end for a short visit at her home in Larchmont, N. Y.

Engaged Couple Is Entertained

Miss Frances Mathews and Mr. Thomas McAvoy Party Guests.

Several parties have been given this week in honor of Miss Frances Mathews, of West Chester, Pa., and her fiance, Mr. Thomas Dowell McAvoy, of this city, who are to be married here on Saturday at 5 p. m. in the home of Miss Mathews' sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ridgeway Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Woods, cousins of Miss Mathews, entertained in their honor at a buffet supper in their home over the week-end. Mr. and Mrrs. Griffith Clark, of Catonsville, Md., entertained in their honor earlier in the week at a cocktail party, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Taylor entertained recently in their honor at a small dinner in their home when their guests included Miss Mathews, Mr. McAvoy, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ridgeway Taylor, Miss Helen Taylor and Miss Claire Taylor.

Miss Mathews' mother, Mrs. Henry van Sciver Mathews, arrived Saturday from West Chester and will be with her daughter, Mrs. C. Ridgeway Taylor, until after the wedding Saturday.

Will Visit America.

Mme. Camperio, wife of Admiral Filippo Camperio, Royal Italian Navy, will arrive Thursday of this week on the Conte di Savoia, accompanied by her daughters, the Misses Louisa and Terry Camperio, and before coming to Washington will spend a few weeks in New York at 375 Park avenue.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

The Sigurd von Numers are a delightful couple. Both of them are tall and fair and possess a keen sense of humor. Not that ability in punning is a measuring rod, but they are much quicker at it than many of us Americans, and in English, too.

Mme. von Numers took their small son shopping with her the other morning. One of the stores visited was the butcher shop. There, young Master von Numers spied three little coal-black kittens, wabbling around behind the counter. He had a jolly time playing with them, pulling them out from under baskets and trailing whisps of string for them to chase. The butcher put one of the mousers into a brown paper bag, with its cute fat face the only part visible, then presented the unusual package to the young member of the diplomatic set. But, alas, the von Numers home is an apartment and no place for a pet. So that was that.

Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld wears very-good-looking clothes. We saw her at luncheon at Pierre's and indulged in several downright bold stares just to take in her attire. Beginning at the top of her smoothly coiffed black bob, there was a tiny fly-away hat of black felt and Persian lamb—one of those pointed Scotch affairs. This just matched her "frock coat" or whatever one would call it. The frock part was just a very chic and simple dress of black wool crepe, but—and thereby hangs a tale. Over her right schoulder was a coat of the lamb, worn in the Austrian style. The collar or what would have been the collar, slanted diagonally across her back like a Sam Brown belt and fastened under her left arm. The coat part divided down the center of the back.

Mrs. G. was having luncheon with two of her friends and sitting just quietly as you please beside the table and paying not a wit of attention to anyone was a huge Doberman Pinscher, whose nice eyes informed us that he was not as ferocious as he looked.

• • • •

Mary Tyler McCormick has a new hat or we miss our guess. Saw her downtown the other noon and she was carrying a very swanky be-pictured box. Her dark-brown coat had a luxurious collar of fluffy lynx that swayed and flounced in rhythm to her walk. Pulled down over her golden curls was a brown felt sports hat.

Election Forecasts Mrs. Howard's Topic

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard's lecture at Sulgrave Club this morning at 11:30 o'clock will be on "Election Forecasts." Our electoral system will be explained in detail and the "Voteless District," a subject close to the hearts of Washingtonians, will be reviewed.

Observations on her recent tour in Austria and Hungary will be included in Mrs. Howard's survey of foreign affairs, and a New York dramatic success will be added to her usual book reviews. In keeping with the day there will be a program of patriotic songs and music preceding and following the lecture hour.

NavySetPays Pettingills Its Respects

Visitors Find Treasures in Home Restored by Commandant's Wife.

By Dudley Harmon.

With the aid of her son and the more energetic members of the Navy Yard staff, Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the commandant, has been industriously investigating the architectural treasures lying beneath a series of coats of paint left on furniture and woodwork by the many former occupants of the commandant's quarters. After no little work, she has uncovered among other things an old mantel of Italian marble, ceilings of unusual beauty, and some Victorian furniture which once occupied a place of honor in the White House.

Yesterday members of Capital society had an apportunity to view the transformation at Mrs. Pettingill's first "at home" of the season. They found the old house—it was built early in the previous century—shining with new paint and paper, loops of rich silk at the windows.

Mrs. Pettingill has painted several of her ceilings a darker shade to eliminate an impression of too great height, and with her own hands has scraped and finished several of the gilt mirrors, which are among the largest in Washington.

Practically the entire Navy turned out yesterday to pay its respects to Mrs. Pettingill and the admiral. She wore a gown of eel gray satin with a beige chiffon bodice and was assisted in the dining room by Mrs. Theodore Rudock and Mrs. John Sullivan. Mrs. Lyman Perry and Lieut. Comdr. Perry, the commandant's aid, were also present.

Among those noted were Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. H. Standley, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. John Russell, the latter wearing a black coat and sable scarf, with matching hat; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol.

Also Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry Hough, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Courtney, Brig. Gen. John Beaumont, Capt. and Mrs. J. S. Evans, with their daughter, Miss Madeleine Evans; Capt. and Mrs. A. M. R. Allen, Commander and Mrs. Wallace Lind, Capt. and Mrs. D. F. Ducey, Capt. and Mrs. Charles Fisher, Commander and Mrs. V. C. Griffin and Capt. and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews.

Nov. 17 Fxed As Date For Saint Ann's Frolic

The Rev. Maurice King has announced November 17 as the date for St. Ann's annual frolic at the Willard Hotel. The committee has selected prizes for each table of cards, and there will be music for dancing.

The next meeting of the committee on arrangements will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the rectory.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

ALICE HUGHES.

TONIGHT'S the night when sensible New York women lock themselves and the kiddies into their inner chambers and refuse to answer the doorbell or even to help Daddy to bed when he comes in after "listening to the returns." The rest of us, with the spirit of the pioneer women who won the West, go out on the town and get kicked about.

Of course, only idiots and professional lady wrestlers venture into Times Square on election night. A hundred thousand maniacs gather there to push and holler as the moving electric sign on the Times Building spells out the news, and though the selling of devil's brew is strictly forbidden until after the polls close, which is at 9 p. m. in the Empire State this season, there are always plenty of rampaging rumpots to knock off hats and rip haberdashery. It is almost as bad as New Year's Eve in Times Square, and that is the worst there is.

Gentler souls like me take a crack at an election night party or two. They seem to be epidemic this year. The little old gentleman and I have been asked to half a dozen—among the bidders being Hagar Wilde, the lovely novelist and short story writer; Henry Dryfuss, the bright young man who has designed the Mercury Train, and other modernities, and the Kenneth Campbells, newspaper folk, Ken also having served with my poor spouse in the War of 1812. I am spending the morning polling these hospitable friends on their brand of politics. I have no intention of getting snared by a post-election wake, with 20 mournful people sitting around the clammy body of a dead political dream. I want fun!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The free-for-all which will ultimately award the title of Society Glamor-Girl Debutante of 1936-37 has now narrowed to a toe-to-toe slugging match between two contestants—the brunette Eleanor Young, who stole the show at Newport last summer, and the blonde Priscilla St. George, pride of Tuxedo Park. Both are worthy battlers, with huge cheering sections of nifty boy friends, and are considered in flossy Park Avenue saloons to be even-money bets. But even if she gets the nod, Priscy will soon relinquish the title, as she is expected to marry Angie Duke, of THE Dukes, within a year . . .

• • • •

Mary Lewis, who used to trill in opera and is now the helpmate of wealthy shipping man Bob Hague, must want to buy Daddy a peck of diamond shirt studs or something. She's warbling now at the Versailles night spot for a miserable $2,000 a week! It's her first job in such a place. There these creatures go again—taking the caviar right out of the mouths of poor professional girls whose emerald bracelets don't even reach their funny bones! It's a dratted shame, so it is! . . .

• • • •

Maude Adams, the Great Unknown, has just stolen into town in her perennial mouse-like way, and I hear she would not be averse to doing a show on Broadway. It is 18 years since this little Kiskadden girl from Utah last showed New York her pixy theatrical magic, when I was still battling solid geometry. To many of us Maude Adams is just a few anecdotes, or a dream. . . .

• • • •

Kitty Carlisle, the movie songbird who is now prima donna of "White Horse Inn," is reported to be suffering from an outbreak of backstage temperament, and several other members of the cast wouldn't care much if she cracked a tonsil going after one of those high ones. "Inn," by the way, is jamming 'em into the center in Radio City. There's always an audience for spectacular musical shows here—but for only one a season, mind!

• • • •

Did you read where Dr. Louis Bisch, that old psychologist, says that neurotic women make the best wives because they keep their husbands interested with their didoes? The consensus here is that New York is thus crammed with perfect wives—but that instead of interesting their husbnads they drive 'em loopy! Ole Doc Bisch sure knows how to sell a headline—has for years!

Lacy Paris-Inspired Bibs for Boudoir Breakfasting

A modern version of the old-time bedjacket, the novelty lace bib (right), cut in a deep, wide triangle which covers the shoulders in both back and front. It is simply made, cut in two semi-triangles and joined in front with a double frill of a more delicate lace, which also borders the bib all around. Another new Paris-inspired bib (below) of frilly lace ruffles, made in jabot-style and extending to the waistline. The ribbon binding ties in a perky bow under the chin.

Paris Creates Bibs for Wear OverNightgown

Idea Spreads Rapidly to This Country; Usually Made of Lace.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

AS a decided reaction from sophisticated daytime and evening costumes, period influences and complicated coiffures; smart women have adopted juvenile touches for more intimate apparel. They are wearing bibs! The idea started in Paris and has quickly gained popularity on this side of the Atlantic.

Bibs of various materials in several clever shapes and methods of styling are now worn over the nightgown to prevent cold shoulders while breakfasting or reading in bed. These have relegated the bed jackets to the background; being smarter and easier to throw about the shoulders.

Fashioned of Lace.

These new nightgown bibs are usually fashioned of lace—row after row of narrow or wider lace gathered in very feminine-looking frills. Or, all-over lace patterns made with chic little stand-up collars and the bib bordered in lace ruffles. In either event, tied around the neck and extending to the top of the gown or down to the waistline.

Some of these attractive and practical bibs are as the name implies, merely bibs; copied after the bibs of the wee members of the family. Others have become more complicated and have developed into capelets, huge jabot-like affairs, and collars which cover the entire top of the nightgown.

Harmonize With Nightgown.

These alluring bibs may be of lace harmonizing with the nightgown, or in contrasting tints, such as ivory or deep ecru. Tinted laces, particularly the pastels, are also suggested as attractive accents—bibs to offset sleek gowns of satin or crepe. Ribbon ties usually match bibs in color.

Since these new lingerie accessories are so easily made, they would be ideal Christmas gifts for any member of the family; equally suitable for youngest daughter and grandmother. One bib is simply cut in two semi-triangles of all-over lace, and joined at the front with a double frill of lace, which also finishes the edges all around.

Circular ruffles of lace that form a bib covering the entire bodice is another effective method for fashioning these new bibs. Regardless of the styling, they may be either large or small, according to individual preference. An ideal gift to the business woman—to be donned while she is applying her make-up and combing her hair in the morning. Also, an excellent gift to the college girl, or to the bride for her trousseau. And a smart and practical acquisition to your own wardrobe.

Guests Serving Selves Worry Their Hostess

Latter May Feel Free to Put Assertive Persons in Their Proper Place.

By Margaret Wallace.

GUESTS who make themselves too much at home seem to be one of the major worries of a number of Washington hostesses, according to three letters received in one mail by this department. One hostess asks what she is to do about the guest who orders another round of cocktails, although the servants in the kitchen are prepared to go home and the host and hostess are making ready to speed the departing guests.

Another is annoyed at guests who send her chauffeur on personal errands all over town and thus make the family car not available to bring the children from school or to take another guest to the railway station. Still another guest annoyance is the guest who invites people to her hostess' house without asking permission.

An Officious Visitor.

The first letter reads: "I have a house guest who has established herself in my house and taken over the reins of the social activity of my entire family. Recently she arranged a dinner party. My husband arranged for the serving of cocktails and I had to hire extra servants because the number of guests invited was more than our regular domestic staff could care for.

"When the dinner guests were preparing to depart at a very late hour our house guest urged them to stay for another round of cocktails. She bustled into the kitchen and demanded the cocktails made, although the servants had on their hats and coats ready to depart.

"Most of the guests declined the invitation to wait for the cocktails. Our house guest suggested that as my husband myself were probably tired that we might go to bed and that she would look after the few guests remaining. This I declined to do, of course. Do you think it would be inhospitable to ask our house guest not to act as hostess and not to give orders to our servants?"

Put Guests In Place.

Most certainly a hostess should be mistress of her own house. The officious house guest should be politely put in her place. Tell her that you make it a rule to have all the family make their requests to the servants through you. Assume the role of hostess yourself whenever she attempts to do so. Treat her as a guest. It would be quite in form to tell her that you were sorry that she offered additional cocktails to your guests and urged them to stay later as you had not planned to do so yourself. If she does not take this hint firmer methods may be necessary.

There is probably nothing more annoying to a householder than the stranger under the roof who insists on using the home as a hotel. The hostess can deal with these guests ruthlessly for they cannot be oversensitive or they would not be so assertive in taking perogatives which do not belong to them. It will be quite proper to tell this type of guest that the chauffeur is needed to take the children to and from school and for other purposes of the family.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After Soliciting Girl's "Steady Company," Boy Reneges on Football Date; She Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a certain boy for three years. This summer he asked me to go steady with him, which I did. We are both seniors in high school. Since school has started I have had six dates with him, although we have not been going steady with each other. It has been very difficult to make new acquaintances with boys since I've told all my other friends I was going steady with this one. (Just tonight, for instance, I read in the paper where a former friend had secured his license to marry.)

• • • •

This boy's mother is very particular about the girls he goes with. She has to meet and know the girl with whom he plans to date before she gives her approval. I guess I'm fortunate to have been able to go with him as long as I have. Well, last evening I had a date with him—the first in three weeks. He asked me if I would go to the football game with him Friday. I didn't accept right off, because it is hard to stay away from school all day without a written excuse and all class work made up in advance. The game is being played 100 miles from here.

• • • •

Today, after school, he was walking down the hall with a certain girl his mother very much disapproves of; he met me and asked if I had made up my mind yet; then, without giving me a chance to say "yes," he told me that the boy he had planned to go with could not use his car and therefore the trip was called off. This looks suspicious to me because last evening he was so anxious for me to go; and furthermore, he never misses a game that is played.

• • • •

We have confessed our love for each, therefore his sudden change of mind about the game is kind of hard to forgive or forget. I know he is going to the game. So how should I act when I see him at school afterward? He lives only one block from me and I know I'll see him Saturday.

I have tried before now to forget him and turn him down when he calls for a date, but I always give in. I can attribute his not calling so often recently to his going to school during the day and three nights a week, but surely school work doesn't keep him home every other night. Thanking you for any advice, I am BETTINA B.

Show Some Spunk.

DEAR BETTINA: If your surmise is correct; if the boy backed down on his invitation and went to the game without you, it seems to me you are entitled to take him to task about it. Not because he decided to renege the invitation; after all, that was his privilege, if he felt that way about it and was unsporting enough to do it; but because he lied his way out of it. That was pretty inexcusable, after three years' friendship.

• • • •

However, it's just possible you maneuvered him into extending a half-hearted invitation he didn't really mean, and that on second thought he decided he would be justified in using any tactics to get himself out of it. In that case, you would be partly responsible for your subsequent disappointment. But even that possibility doesn't condone his heavy-handed deception.

• • • •

His recent actions, as told by you, would seem to indicate that his interest is waning. You probably won't help matters much by giving him a piece of your mind regarding the football episode, but you might as well obtain credit for having some spunk and spirit. If he wants to be on his way to other pastures, give him a rousing send-off. M. H.

Scores 'Old-Fashioned Mother."

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I have read some rather monumental examples of bigotry and self-deception in the letters written to you, but "Old-Fashioned Mother," in her contribution published October 26, reached an all-time high in the field.

Mother love is never selfish—according to her! I could cite instances of at least half a dozen families, possessing from to one to four children, whose lives have been sacrificed to mothers who gained their own ends through pleading so-called mother love.

• • • •

In fact, at 18 I was in a fair way to becoming an excellent example myself. However, I adopted a course of action such as you recommended to "Only Child," broke away and now, 13 years later, I am very happily married and have two lovely children. Would it have happened if I had remained at home? Never in this world.

In all the time I was in my mother's vicinity I never received one proposal of marriage. Five months after I came to Washington I had one proposal—which the young man promptly reconsidered after meeting my mother. When, two years later, I did marry, it was a man who had never met her, and he still admits that he might not have had the courage to undertake it if he had met Mother first.

• • • •

My brother and two sisters, who practiced "Old Fashioned Mother's" advice and showed her patience and love, are still living at home, still having their friends criticized, their actions censored, although the youngest is 27 and the oldest almost 40.

• • • •

Far from being an unnatural son, I think the boy who wrote asking your advice showed an astonishing amount of character for a person reared as he has been. Also, I think that if fathers and mothers are to be honored they should deserve it; not expect it merely because of their parenthood. The offspring of such women have been victimized too long. I agree with you thoroughly in your advice, every word of which I read, and if the boy to whom it was directed follows it, I say—more power to him!

• • • •

Incidentally, if "Old Fashioned Mother" thinks the description of the mother in the case was overdrawn, she might be interested to know that the article was called to my attention by my husband, who was struck by the apt description of my own mother.

FELLOW VICTIM.

• • • •

DEAR FELLOW VICTIM: Since "Old Fashioned Mother's" letter was published here, I have received a good many letters from persons who feel about the whole thing as you do, and, surprisingly enough, none—with the exception of that one—to the contrary. These letters seem to suggest that "Old Fashioned Mother" might well examine her conscience carefully to see if, perhaps, she is indeed the victim of bigotry and self-deception. However, it is probable she would be the last to recognize the truth, even if thus afflicted. It has been said: "Convince a man against his will; he's of the same opinion still." M. H.

Tips to Wall Flowers

ELSIE was the odd one. At parties she would sit alone, or watch the children. It was always she who sat alone in the rumble seat on the return home from a football game, she who prepared the lunch and cleared up.

Then she disappeared for several weeks. At Miriam's party Elsie strolled in with a Prince Charming. The crowd gasped. Elsie, the little brown moth, changed into a gay butterfly. What had happened?

Naturally, her girl friends were curious—and a little jealous, too. "How did you so completely change?" they asked, "I discovered my personality and how to make the most of it. I developed it just as one develops any other characteristic."

Beauty or appearance has nothing to do with personality. Marie Dressler wasn't beautiful, but she had personality. Lady Astor, Helen Keller, Diana Wynyard—each has a wonderful personality. And such personality—such charm and grace can be developed, just as movie queens have developed theirs.

Our new 40-page booklet, Improving your personality, analyzes various elements that go to make up a charming personality. Describes development of temperament, tact, emotions, phases of beauty. Concise and interesting, it may give you the key that will unlock your own hidden charming personality.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Improving Your Personality," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Facts and Fallacies About Cancer.

So many questions come to us about cancer and there is so much popular misinformation as to its real nature that it seems wise to attempt to supply the answers to some of the queries which have been propounded.

How does it arise? That we do not know definitely. But some factors that have to do with its origin have been demonstrated. For example: Long continued irritation is of great significance. A single blow scarcely need be considered, although tumors involving a bone have been noted following a severe contusion. But even this is not positive because we do not know exactly the previous condition of the wounded part. Some degenerative process may have been inaugurated long before the accident took place.

On the other hand, irritation—that persists—is a frequent cause. Coal tar can be rubbed into the skin, and if the process is repeated often enough it will produce a growth of the outer layer of cells (epithelium). Continued abrasion from a jagged, rough tooth may result in tumors in the mouth or on the tongue. Workers in petroleum who are subject to the constant rubbing of oil soaked clothing against the skin may foster a state of skin reaction which is termed precancerous.

Does diet have anything to do with this dread disease? There are some who believe that the appearance of trouble in the stomach or the intetsine may bear a relationship to dietary indiscretions. Swallowing very hot food is certainly unwise and it may be that if this is practiced with regularity a special type of indigestion may be set up, only to be followed by an ulcer and later by an overgrowth of "wild" cells.

I have heard it said that "meat is the cause of cancer" and that "tomatoes breed cancer." To the best of our knowledge no one of these foods has the slightest influence. Statistics do not differentiate between those who use a high meat diet, those who are strict vegetarians, or those who overindulge in any particular kind of food.

It should be said, however, that all forms of gastrointestinal disorders may weaken the mucous lining of the tract and thus predispose to harmful growths.

Pay Youngster Well for Jobs, Parent Urged

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"IF YOU will mow the lawn and weed the vegetable garden I'll pay you five cents an hour."

Mr. Smith was well satisfied with the bargain he had made with his son. He could play golf or read or sit and smoke in his off hours. It would have been beyond his means to pay a man to do the work.

If his conscience troubled him at all when he watched his small son pushing the lawn mower or bending over the vegetable garden for long hours at a time in order to receive the quarter or dime he had earned, he comforted himself with the thought that the boy was learning how to work, and something was better than nothing.

But even at ten Sam was not so easily fooled. The boy next door got a dollar for mowing the lawn, and by hurrying could easily do the job in a morning. A man was paid 50 cents an hour, and the youngster who went out to work regularly received a quarter. To his father's indignation, Sam struck for higher wages.

If the family cannot afford to pay for work, there is no reason to hire a child to do it. He can do for nothing some of the tasks which are necessary to keep the house and garden going. The children share in the benefits, and as members of the family can and should also share in the duties.

If wages are paid they should be commensurate with the work. A boy of ten can probably not do as thorough and certainly not as quick a job as a boy of fourteen or as a man. He need not, therefore, receive as much pay.

Film Actress Indulges In Metal Monograms

Beverly Roberts, film star, says she is an initial fiend. She doesn't care about sparkling gems but loves the feeling of individuality and distinction that a metal monogram gives. She wears a little gold initialled medallion on the lapel of her tailored suit; has a dark felt hat with a monogrammed buckle; has initialed clips and pins. She never has her initials appear more than one place on her castume at a time, but one can usually detect B. R. some place on the lady.

Elizabeth Arden introduces the new COLOR CAPES

Personal Representative here all this week!

Bright new season . . . all glitter and change. High hats, short skirts, Edwardian coiffures, dramatic colors. If you think you "can't wear" the new colors you'll miss half the excitement. So Elizabeth Arden has originated these Color Capes, each one matched exactly to an important costume color, and she has worked out special make-ups for every shade.

Slip one around your shoulders. Then while the color reflects on your face, let our Elizabeth Arden representative suggest to you the right make-up. (The Color Harmony Chart has this all down so you won't forget.)

Widow of M. Jusserand Is Honor Guest At Tea Given for Alliance Francaise

Lady Lindsay of British Embassy Among Those at Function.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mme. Jules J. Jusserand, who is here for the unveiling of the memorial in Rock Creek Park to her late husband, the former Ambassador of France, was honored yesterday at a tea given by Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace at her home on Massachusetts avenue for members of the Alliance Francaise, of which she is vice president.

The function, from 5 to 7, is one of the many being given this week in compliment to the distinguished visitor. She returns to the Capital after 12 years' absence to find countless friends who remember her as one of the most beloved ladies ever to preside over an embassy in Washington.

Mme. Jusserand arrived yesterday with Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the present French Ambassador, who follows closely in her footsteps as a popular and gracious hostess. She wore a small black hat with a short veil, a black dress, black feather boa and a black velvet band and pearls at her neck. Her corsage was of gardenias. Mme. de Laboulaye, whom she is visiting at the embassy, wore a black velvet hat of beret style, a blue coat and fur over her black dress.

After the tea, she and Mme. Jusserand returned home for a quiet evening. Mme. Jusserand probably will remain in Washington until next Wednesday and will devote the last two days of her stay to seeing her intimate friends.

Mrs. Wallace had receiving with her the guest of honor and Mr. Lynch Luquer, president of the society. She wore a gown of black velvet and pearls at her neck. She was assisted at the tea table by Miss Harriet Winslow, Miss Edith Hoyt, Miss Nannie McComb and Miss Sarah Lee. Tea roses formed the center bouquet for the table, which was lighted by four candles in a delicate shade of yellow.

Lady Lindsay, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain, who is entertaining at luncheon on Thursday for Mme. Jusserand, was among the guests, and wore a tailored costume of brown, with a brown felt hat.

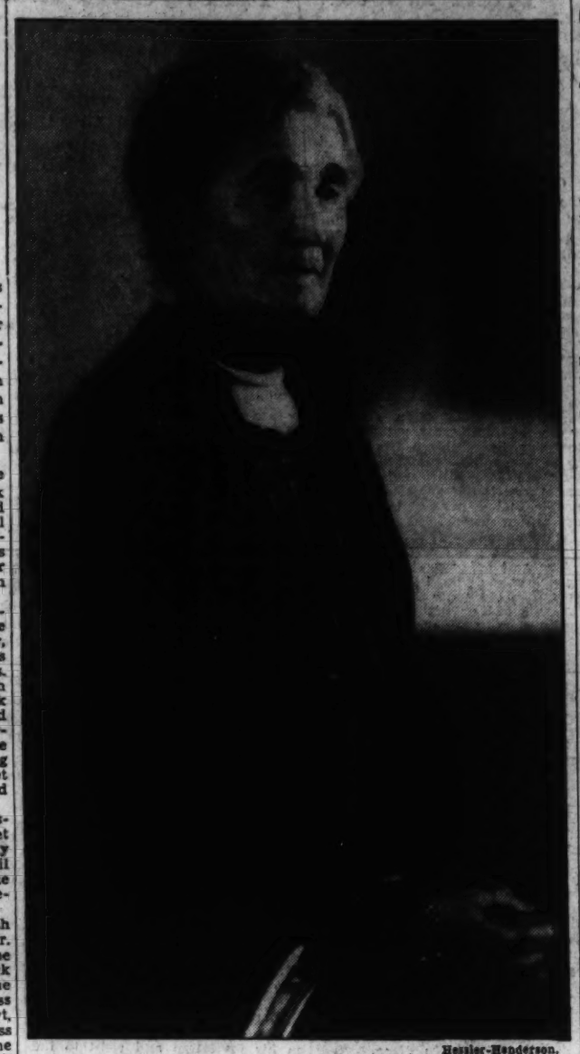
Miss Margaret Delano Gage, who has lived for many years in a house across the way from Mrs. Wallace's home, was among the members of the Alliance Francaise who was present. Mrs. ennen Jennings also was there, as were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mme. B. J. Bimont, an officer of the society, with practically all of its membership.

Former Resident Here.

Vice Admiral and Mrs. Sidney Bailey, of London, England, who are visiting in this country, are at the Wardman Park Hotel during their stay in Washington. Mrs. Bailey is the former Mildred Bromwell, of this city.

Texans at Wardman.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Chase, of Dallas, Tex., are in Washington for a visit of several days and during their stay they are occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel.



Hessler-Henderson.

Many to Entertain At Election Parties

Several Arrange Dinners at Shoreham Tonight.

Many parties are being planned this evening on the occasion of Election Night.

The Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of Labor, Mr. Richardson Saunders, and Mrs. Saunders will have among their guests at a dinner party at the Shoreham Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Mrs. Daniel W. McCormack, wife of the Commissioner of Immigration, and Mr. Joseph Stinson.

Judge and Mrs. Rush L. Holland will entertain there also for their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wells, of Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Howard will have among their guests at a dinner party at the Shoreham Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Withers, Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. Krewson, Mrs. James R. Shepherd and Mrs. John Bullard, of Richmond, Va., house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Withers, and Mr. Roger Barnes.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Chamberlin also will entertain at the Shoreham tonight and among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Norton and Mr. and Mrs. J. Bernard Corridon.

On the Air Today

Whatever may be the relationship of press and radio for the next four years—or whatever it my have been in the last four—the two join hands tonight in bringing to the American public the most comprehensive early election returns in the history of politics.

It is interesting to note that the networks gave generously to campaign speakers in the last six months but that no commercial contracts are being canceled tonight in order to provide a sustained account of how America votes. This is as it should be. Returns are received in sketchy quantities in the early evening hours, certainly not justifying throwing an evening's schedule overboard. Yet—a grand and thrilling saga of radio could be written if returns were to hold the spotlight the entire evening.

The Post cordially invites the listening public to turn to WJSV for complete returns, after 10:30 p. m. tonight.

Huge blackboards have been erected in a special radio and telephone election returns room—256 square feet of them. The public will positively not be admitted to this room.

A special detail of phone girls and a special radio squad will report throughout the night the returns as they are posted on the boards by a crew of messengers handling the latest A. P., U. P., and special Post correspondents' reports—just a matter of a few seconds after they are received on the printer machines.

Alternately The Post and the New York office of the Columbia Network will keep the listener up to the minute. An elaborate system, also consisting of boards and special services, will insure Columbia's commentators in New York being on top of the situation every minute.

Background material, observations and comment will be supplied WJSV listeners through the network portions of the night's broadcasting. The Post's contribution will principally be figures—and we believe with such an arrangement that the very latest facts and trends can be made available to Post-WJSV listeners.

* * * *

Several programs listed as usual in the Timetable on this page will be interrupted earlier in the evening to provide listeners with early flashes. Many commercial programs plan to flash returns periodically as part of their scheduled shows.

WOL expects to broadcast five minutes of election returns in each half-hour of broadcasting beginning at 6:45 p. m. These periods do not show on the scheduled periods on the Timetable as space does not permit their listing.

WJSV offers an early evening service with several quarter-hours scheduled beginning at 6 p. m.

* * * *

Win or lose, the first scheduled radio appearance of President Roosevelt follows on the heels of the election. He addresses a Pan American Peace Conference next Saturday at 8:30 p. m.

* * * *

Features today:

Mabelle Jennings—Tells Columbia network listeners what Washingtonians do the day all other citizens vote, through sidewalk interview, WJSV, at 1:15.

Pimlico Futurity—With Bryan Field announcing, WOL, at 4:30.

Radio Joe—Stages an old-time election night party, WMAL, at 7:30.

Boake Carter—Guests with Ken Murray, giving election comments, WJSV, at 8:30. Also an election skit.

Mildred Bailey—"Old rocking chair" songstress guests with Ben Bernie, WMAL, at 9.

"Caravan"—Features an election night musical revue with Francia White and Frank Forrest, WJSV, at 9:30.

Fred Astaire—Reveals himself as a piccolo virtuoso an dtries to make a tap dancer of Charley Butterworth, WRC, at 9:30.

"The Ballot Box"—Roundup of returns from six Mutual System stations over the country, WOL, at 10:15.

Ted Weems—And orchestra star in "Portraits of Harmony," WMAL, at 10:30. With Gale Page.

Judge Eugene O. Sykes—Federal Communications Commissioner talks on "Sixteen Years of Broadcasting," observing anniversary of network broadcasting, WMAL, at 11:15.

* * * *

Election sidelights: WJSV presents to C. B. S., listeners the country's youngest voter, James Sterling Toothman, employe of the Bureau of Air Commerce, this city, who votes by absent voter ballot at Hepzibah, W. Va. He is to be heard at precisely 10:52 p. m. . . . The "human adding machine," Dr. Salo Finkelstein, will be back with Columbia's forces tonight to compute with dizzy speed the returns flooding the network's work room in New York studios.

D. C. Society Sees Opening Of New Play

"Ethan Frome" Makes Deep Impression on Audience.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Among Hostesses in Boxes.

Society was well represented in the audience which gathered last night at the National Theater to see the dramatization of Edith Wharton's tragedy, "Ethan Frome." The usual light chatter evident at most first night entr' actes was somewhat missing on this occasion; perhaps the dramatic somberness of the Pulitzer prize winning play left an unusually marked impression on the audience.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was among those entertaining a large party of friends. She wore a long black crepe gown trimmed at the neck with silver. Earlier in the day Mrs. Wilson entertained at a luncheon in honor of Mme. Jusserand, wife of the late Ambassador of France who served here during the Administration of President Wilson.

Miss Nancy Newbold chose black for the occasion; her chiffon gown was floor length and had a deep decolletage, a jeweled clip furnishing the only color note. Mrs. Royce Powell also wore black; her frock was made with a halter neck and a cluster of brilliants at the waist, over which she wore a fur cape. With Mr. Powell she had motored in from their home in Alexandria.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter entertained a large box party at the theater last evening. Mrs. Arthur Condon compared opinions on the play with friends during the intermission as did Miss Audrey Campbell, who wore a gray street length dress made with a flared skirt. Others present included Mr. Eugene Vidal, Mr. Fred Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hamilton, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis of Saint'Orsola; Miss Mary Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. Steven Upson, Mr. Fred Hunt and Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright.

James B. Alleys Lease Home Here.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Alley will come tomorrow to Washington from their home at Jericho, Long Island, and have leased the home of Mrs. Clarence Wilson, at 2021 Q street. Mr. Alley is general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Soon to Be Bride of Senator's Son

MISS LAURA DOUGLAS, whose engagement has been announced by her mother, Mrs. O. F. Douglas. She will be married in the near future to Mr. Charles Saxon Farley Smith, son of Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina. Miss Douglas has been living abroad with her mother for the past few years following studies in Geneva, Munich and Berlin. Due to illness in the family, the wedding will be a small one with only members of the immediate families present.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, entertained at luncheon yesterday for Lady Geddes, wife of Sir Auckland Geddes, former Ambassador here from Great Britain. Lady Geddes came to this country from England several weeks ago and is visiting in Washington.

The guests included the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Mrs. F. C. Bradley, the Military Attache of the Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims, the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Miss Laura Harlan, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Sidney Bailey, who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Sims; Dr. Sinclair W. Bowen and Mr. Louis Hertle.

The German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, is planning to sail within two or three weeks for a brief vacation in Germany. He will return to Washington early in January.

The First Secretary of the Embassy, Dr. Herbert Scholz, will return about November 15 from a business trip to the West and Middle West.

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd will be hosts at a cocktail party this afternoon in their apartment at the Mayflower in celebration of the anniversary of the independence day of their country. Their guests will include members of the Panamanian colony in Washington.

The Minister and Senora de Boyd will occupy the legation on New Hampshire avenue later in the month, after renovations now in progress have been completed.

Mme. Jusserand, widow of the former French Ambassador, Jules Jusserand, will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Charles Stewart Alden will entertain at dinner this evening.

Mme. Jusserand will be guest of honor at a tea to be given by the Newspaper Women's Club on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Admiral, the house which was the French Embassy, where Mme. Jusserand and the late former Ambassador resided while the embassy on Sixteenth street was being built.

Mrs. Walter Edge, wife of the former Ambassador to France, regrets that she has been obliged to recall invitations issued for a tea tomorrow afternoon in honor of Mme. Jusserand.

The Misses Cecilia and Marie vom Rath, who came to Washington for the wedding last Saturday of Miss Suzanne Hill to Mr. Phillips Huntington Clarke, will return tomorrow to their home in Southampton, Long Island. They made their debut in Washington last season.

Former Representative and Mrs. E. Hart Fenn, of Weathersfield, Conn., have arrived in Washington for the winter and have leased the apartment of Mrs. Joseph E. Washington, at 1302 Eighteenth street.

Mr. Eugene O'Dunn and Mr. Stephen Spingarn have issued invitations for a cocktail party on Sunday in honor of Miss Caroline Thompson and her fiance, Mr. John Farr Simmons.

Miss Pauline de Brodes, who was at the Wardman Park Hotel over the week-end, has returned to Chambersburg, Pa., where she is in charge of the French department of Penn Hall Junior College. She will spend every week-end in Washington at the Wardman Park and will continue in the near future the soirees which she held last year.

Walshs Are Home After Wedding Trip

Couple to Reside on New Hampshire Avenue.

A wedding trip through New England has ended for Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Walsh and they are now at home at 513 New Hampshire avenue. Mrs. Walsh, the former Miss Fannie W. Jasper, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Wesley Jasper, of Somerset, Ky.

Mr. Walsh is the son of Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, of Scranton, Pa. The couple were married October 24 at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, with the Rev. Cornelius Dacey officiating.

Attendants were Miss Elizabeth Jasper, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Mr. William J. Farrell as best man. Ushers were Mr. William J. Gerrity, of Elmhurst, Long Island, and Mr. John Forbes, of Washington.

A card party benefit for St. Ann's Church will be given November 17 at the Willard Hotel. The Rev. Maurice King is chairman.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Howard F. Wentworth.
Diarying for Samuel Lubell.

Right This Way!

Hold your hats and don't stand up! . . . at least until the fireworks start . . . it's the biggest show on earth, folks, and tonight the curtain rises . . . hold your ticket stubs and don't push . . . nephews and nieces of Uncle Sam, we give you a Presidential election!

And even voteless Washington can be painted the well known red . . . from all indications there are going to be several coats . . . and they'll be spread rather thickly from one end of town to the other . . . cogs of the Governmental machine will slip tonight . . . slip into various states of hysterical enthusiasm . . . waiting patiently (?) to hail "The Winnah!"

Among many scheduled election return gatherings is "a big celebration from 8:30 p. m. until———," sponsored by the Democratic League of the District in the Hamilton Hotel. They have taken over the entire second floor and announce there will be "a hot time in the old town tonight." Senator Pat Harrison, Mrs. J. Bordon Harriman, Commissioners Hazen, Allen and Sultan and other distinguished guests are expected.

An interesting pamphlet describing work among the country's Indians has just been issued by the Office of Indian Affairs. With current efforts to promote Indian-made goods, this pamphlet should be read by every member of Uncle Sam's working force.

With the present controversy over retail and producer milk prices at its height, a timely item is noted in a recent issue of the Consumers' Guide, AAA publication. Cattle in 2,923 out of 3,070 counties in the country, it was pointed out, were practically free from cattle tuberculosis when tested recently. These figures are important, because keeping cattle in good health means protecting the health of consumers, the item said.

The senior Mr. Lubell died last week soon after the Fedral Diary editor reached his bedside. Our deepest sympathies—and we are sure those of his many readers—go to Mr. Samuel Lubell.

Show Plans Made By Auto Dealers

Completion of plans for the seventeenth annual auto show November 14 to 21 and renomination of officers marked the November meeting of the Washington Automotive Trade Association in the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Plans for the exhibition, to be held in Calvert Exhibit Hall, 2701 Calvert street northwest, were outlined by R. J. Murphy, show director and manager of the organization. He reported more than a score of manufacturers will participate in the show, while supplemental displays have been arranged by trailer and auto accessory dealers.

The renomination of officers assures their re-election in December. Oscar Coolican, who has been at the head of the association for the last year, will succed himself. Others chosen are J. M. Sanders, first vice president; Lee D. Butler, second vice president; Louis S. Jullien, treasurer, and Louis C. Carl, secretary. The directors nominated are William Rogers, Fred L. Haller and Stanley Horner.

Twelve members of the association were tied for the first choice of exhibit space at the show, by virtue of regular attendance throughout the year. The space was allocated at last night's meeting.

Colladay Certain Landon Will Win

Confidence in an overwhelming victory at the polls today was expressed last night by Edward F. Colladay, the Republican national committeeman for the District.

"Gov. Landon will win by a large majority," Colladay asserted. "I believed we will have a very successful election and that his majority will be enormous."

Colladay added that he thought the Republicans would win at least four, and possibly six, seats in the Senate.

Traffic Head Asks Revival Of 'Hundred'

Civic Group Told Car Deaths Here Show Decline.

Revival on a larger scale of the system of using citizens to inform traffic officials of persons they see violating driving regulations was suggested yesterday by Director of Traffic William A. Van Duzer in a talk before the Dupont Circle Citizens Association.

Van Duzen also said that the decrease in automobile fatalities here this year, 70 to date as compared with 102 for last year, has been due in a large measure to newspaper campaigns for safety in the streets.

The director, in expressing a desire to use again a committee of citizens, the "secret hundred" of last year, suggested a group of 500. These men and women, he said, would report violations of rules, and when five violations were noted against one driver he would be called in for a conference, with revocation of his permit a possibility.

The association did not act on the suggestion, but Col. John P. Haines, U. S. A., retired, told the assembly, meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, that a similar system, using military officers as agents, was used in 1918 in San Francisco with much success.

E. S. Puller, attorney, talking on the noise problem here, accused the Capital Traction Co. of being the leading nerve jarrer in the District. Buses that do not have adequate mufflers, he said, was the reason. Next in line as noise makers, he added, were motorcycles, trucks and horn-blowing motorists.

8-Hour Day Urged

The Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association, at their monthly meeting last night, went on record as favoring the eight-hour day for firemen.

A memorandum submitted by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, and a petition signed by the Keystone Automobile Club protesting the present diversion of taxes to other purposes were referred to the legislative committee for study and consideration.

The association also voted to indorse the proposed health center to supplement the work now done by hospitals and clinics. A record protest vote scored the voteless condition of residents in the District.

Mrs. Henry W. Draper presided.

New Members Sought

Twisting through its territory like a two-block-long serpent, the Manor Park Citizens Association parade for new membership covered most of its area and netted the organization nine new members.

Headed by Charles S. Howard, first vice president, and boasting a drum and bugle corps, a float and members carrying banners telling of achievements and future aims, the parade doubled and crossed its trail several times before ending at the Whittier School, a block from its starting point, at 6218 Third street northwest, site of the groups beginning 13 years ago.

Municipal Court Judge Robert Mattingly entertained the association with court stories of marriage and divorce for three quarters of an hour at a meeting held after the parade. A short business meeting followed Judge Mattingly's talk.

In addition to members, who either walked or rode in their automobiles, a float was entered by the playground department and the Takoma Park playground.

Original plans for a procession lasting nearly an honr and covering most of the streets in the section had to be curtailed because of rain. The fast moving parade, however, covered nearly 3 miles before being shortened.

Capt. Kelly Talks

The Forest Hills Citizens Association, meeting at Ben Murch School, last night heard a talk by Capt. Lloyd Kelly of the Eighth Precinct.

Leslie Wright, secretary of the organization was appointed chairman of a special membership committee. C. Marshal Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, last night was admitted to membership in the association.

Zonta Club Will Give Charles Dickens Night

The Zonta Club of Washington will present a "Charles Dickens evening" in the auditorium of the National Press Club at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

During the evening meeting Edward F. Payne, president of the Dickens Fellowship Branch of Boston, will give several readings from the books of the great English novelist. He then will discuss his life, and illustrate his talk by slides.

'Traditional Thinking' Blamed For Failure in Child Welfare

Boys of 16 Looked Upon by Many as 'Bums' if They Don't Find Jobs as Soon as They Leave School, Says Louise McGuire, Board Aid.

Louise McGuire, former director of the social service branch of the Juvenile Court and now with the Social Security Board, last night assailed "traditional thinking" as responsible for mistakes in dealing with juvenile delinquency.

Speaking at a meeting of the Public Welfare Association in the Red Cross Building, Miss McGuire said one of the social worker's most serious problem, is in dealing with boys who had left school on reaching their sixteenth birthday.

Since the community is accustomed to believe persons should be either at school or at work, she asserted, these boys are looked upon as bums if they don't manage to get jobs within three weeks after leaving school. Such a viewpoint, she considers, is likely to affect the boy's mental outlook and to assist in driving him to petty crime.

To remedy this situation, Miss McGuire proposed more varied types of schools and the institution of activity centers with no age limit.

Delinquency itself, she said, is caused largely by economic factors and complicated by free competition of rich and poor in schools and industry. Miss McGuire also declared institutionalization of delinquents could be overdone. She expressed the opinion that the money required to send two members of the same family to a correctional institution might often be better spent by improving living conditions of the family.

Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, told the meeting adequate relief work and facilities for recreation, education and health were among the most important factors in dealing with juvenile delinquency.

She recommended closer cooperation among agencies working with juvenile delinquents, preferably with the Board of Public Welfare correlating programs, and the bringing of all institutions into the general stream of social planning.

The association voted to ask the Commissioners to build a 12-occupant cottage at the National Training School for Girls instead of a 25-occupant house as now proposed.

2 Are Injured In Washington Auto Accidents

Dent, police said, was examining the chassis of a truck in the Mandell Chevrolet Co. garage, 1234 Good Hope road southeast, where he is employed as a mechanic, when George Brent, 22, of 631 Raleigh street southeast, a fellow employe, started the engine.

Luther W. Riley, 75, of 321 B street southeast, suffered a broken leg and skull injuries when struck by an automobile as he crossed Pennsylvania avenue in the 300 block southeast.

An autopsy performed on the body of Mrs. Ada Soper, 56, of 436 Luray place northwest, who died at her home yesterday, revealed her death resulted from a blood clot caused by a fractured right arm.

Mrs. Soper was injured October 23 when she was thrown against the front seat when a taxicab in which she was riding made a sudden stop in an effort to avoid striking a child.

Meanwhile two driving permits were revoked and 29 others suspended yesterday by the Revocations Board.

Thirty-day suspensions—Booker T. Coleman, 1522 Twelfth street northwest, 46 miles; Lonnie L. Hatwood, 3063 Vista street northeast, 44 miles; Andrew B. Henry, Alexandria, Va., 40 miles; James E. Hines, 5603 Sixteenth street northwest; 48 miles; Grover C. Jordan, 1014 Columbia northwest, 50 miles; Charles W. Lawyer, 2019 Fourth street northeast, 45 miels; Roma Lo'Bona, 519 Second street southeast, 50 miles; William D. Marshall, 2525 Third street northeast, 42 miles; Arthur C. Meushaw, 36 Adams street northwest, 50 miles; Joseph Miller, 2805 Fourteenth street northwest; James W. Muth, 61 New York avenue northeast, 42 miles; Robert W. Thomas, 3361 Stuyvesant place northwest, 50 miles; Arthur H. Tyre, 6703 Georgia avenue nrothwest, 50 miles.

Naming of Judge Declared Illegal

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 2.—The town council of Front Royal was without authority in designating Walter G. Olmstead, Warren County Trial Justice, as trial officer for the town in September, 1934, and appropriating $500 annually towards his salary, Judge Philip Williams, of the Warren County Circuit Court, decided today.

In the opinion of Judge Williams, the trial justice of a county is also the trial officer of incorporated towns within the county and shall be paid from the county treasury alone, under the Virginia statute providing for the duties and payment of trial justices. Fines for violation of town ordinances shall be turned over to the town but costs in such cases shall be paid into the county treasury, Judge Williams held.

City to Greet Vote Returns In Gay Mood

Night Clubs Stock Heavily for Expected Rush of Celebrators.

Voteless Washington, whose disfranchisement stands out in bold relief today while millions of citizens elsewhere are going to the polls, will nevertheless celebrate the election on a pretentious scale.

A canvass of night clubs last night revealed they are laying in heavy supplies of food and drink in anticipation of overflow crowds.

(Incidentally, the District of Columbia is reputed to be the only spot in the country where one may legally buy a drink or a bottle of liquor on Election Day.)

Several downtown movie houses will have special midnight shows and practically all of them will dispense election returns to their audiences.

Homes Plan Parties.

"Radio parties" are scheduled for tonight in many homes. Thousands of persons, especially Government workers from other cities who are accustomed to mingling in street crowds when ballots are being counted, are expected to descend upon the downtown area to cheer thier choices in front of newspaper offices' amplifiers.

RKO-Keith's, Loew's Capitol and Loew's Palace will present midnight shows. Warner Bros.' Earle and Metropolitan will extend their schedules so that performances will last until midnight.

Many of the night clubs have made arrangements for special wires to give their patrons election returns.

Headquarters Open.

Democrats' receptions, open houses, etc., will be held at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest, 1110 F street northwest, and 1410 G street northwest. Members of Congress Cabinet members and other office holders will foregather at National Committee headquarters in the National Press Building.

Until nightfall when polls begin to close throughout the country, it will be just another Tuesday in the Capital, with business as usual.

One of the few local concessions to the occasion, in contrast to legal holiday routine in the States, was the District Commissioners' decision yesterday to allow municipal employes living in nearby Maryland and Virginia to take two hours off today to cast their ballots without charging it against their annual leave.

Most of the Federal agencies will offer similar privileges, despite a recent recommendation against this practice by the National Executive Council.

Thomas M. Willis Found Dead Here

The body of Thomas Moncure Willis, 44-year-old World War veteran, and member of a prominent Warrenton, Va., family was found in a fifth floor room at a hotel in the 600 b lock of F street northwest yesterday.

Physicians at Casualty Hospital said death probably was due to a heart condition, aggrarated by a recent attack of pneumonia.

Willis was the son of Mrs. F. M. Willis and the late W. T. Willis, of Warrenton. Besides his mother, he is survived by two brothers, William Ashby Willis, of Washington, and T. B. Willis, of Warrenton. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Flossie Willis White, of Washington, and Mrs. David Fisher, of Baltimore.

During the war he served in the Twenty-ninth division. He was a member of John D. Sudduth Post, American Legion. Funeral services and interment will be at Warrenton.

Coroner Starts Inquiry.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 2.—A coroner's investigation was begun Saturday in the death of F. C. Borfee, 53, of Washingtonville, who died Friday night at the Chambersburg Hospital of injuries received that afternoon in an automobile-truck collision. Dr. A. W. Thrush, coroner, will hold an inquest.

Lois' First School Day

Lois Kemp, aided by a court decision, leaves her mother for Gordon Junior High School. She had been kept from the school by the decision of officials that she should be barred because of her Virginia residence.

Lois Kemp Is Back in School First Time Since Court Ruled

Victorious in a court battle over her nonresident status, 11-year-old Lois Kemp was enrolled yesterday and attended "regular" classes for the first time since last June.

The golden-haired daughter of John S. Kemp, assistant disbursing officer in the Public Works Administration, who commutes here daily from Clarendon, Va., was admitted to the Georgetown school after her father had signed an agreement drafted by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal.

Under its terms, her stay at Gordon is assured only through January 31, when the current semester ends. Her schooling after that deadline will depend upon outcome of an appeal which Seal is taking against the recent decision in District Court, which held Lois could not be denied admittance to Washington public schools on the grounds of nonresidence.

"She's there to stay," said Kemp, who has two elder daughters in Western High School and a younger daughter in Fillmore Elementary School. "We are not planning to take her out January 31."

His attorney, Robert E. Lynch, said when arguments on the appeal are heard he will bring out that Washington schools are not as congested as Supt. Frank W. Ballou describes them.

"In this respect," he asserted, "conditions are more favorable than at any time in the last three years."

The District's appeal probably will not be heard before February.

In their arguments against Kemp's petition for a writ of mandamus to compel registration of the Clarendon girl, Dr. Ballou and Seal stressed "overcrowded" conditions in local junior high schools, particularly Gordon.

Mrs. Kemp took Lois to Lynch's office here yesterday morning and from there they went to school headquarters in the Franklin Building to see Dr. Ballou. Kemp previously having signed the provisional agreement drawn up by Seal, the schools superintendent approved the girl's registration and she was taken directly to Gordon.

It was about 11 a. m. when the child took her place at a desk. Her subjects for the remainder of the term will include mathematics, English, science, geography and physical education.

Soldier 30 Years Retires.

Newport News, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—After 30 years of continuous service in the United States Army, Master Sergt. Thomas O. Moore, a native of York County, has been placed on the retirement list. Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy, commandant of Fort Monroe, made public the retirement Saturday in a general order.

Youth, 17, Captured By Police, Believed To Be Match Bandit

A 17-year-old colored youth, suspected by police as being the "match bandit" who has been terrorizing residents in the exclusive sections of Northwest Washington, was trapped as he hid under a bed in the apartment of Charlotte Corbin, of 149 W street northwest.

According to Detectives P. E. Ambrose, F. O. Brass and J. K. Baker, who captured the youth soon after an alarm was broadcast, the prisoner already has admitted two housebreaking cases. In his pockets, they said, were several boxes of matches.

Police explained that a bandit, who has broken into many wealthy homes in the Northwest section, always left burned matches about the rooms he ransacked. They believe the youth to be the thief.

Virginia P. McPherson Of Gordon Junior Dies

Virginia Pearl McPherson, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. McPherson, of 104 West Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., died late yesterday at her home.

A former Gordon Junior High pupil, she had been bedridden for a year and a half. Her father is senior member in the firm of McPherson & Cummings, public accountants.

Besides her parents, she is survived by a brother, David McPherson, jr. Funeral services will be held at her residence tomorrow at 2 p. m., followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Girls Hurt on Highway.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—Two young girls of near Barrelville, 6 miles north of here, were badly cut about the face and body when knocked from the highway through a barbed wire fence by an automobile, which police said was driven by an intoxicated person. The girls, Helen Scheidle, 13, and Margaret Crump, 12, were returned to their homes after their wounds were dressed.

High's Dairy Boosts Price Of Milk 1 Ct.

Follows General Move to Meet Increase to Producers.

Another local dairy joined the general increase in retail milk prices yesterday. Highland Farms Dairy, operating on a "cash and carry" basis, boosted prices to the consumer 1 cent a quart, at the same time announcing a 4-cent increase per gallon to producers.

Last week, when Washington's leading dairies decided to meet farmer demands and make up the difference by raising retail costs, Highland Farms announced that consumer prices would remain the same—10 cents a quart.

Yesterday, however, Philip Rosenfeld, attorney for the Highland distributors, reported the retail increase.

"We have increased the price of milk to our producers 4 cents per gallon," he said, "which includes the 1 cent increase granted last week. This is in keeping with the Highland Farms policy of always paying our producers as much or more than the prevailing market price for milk.

"Since the margin of profit will not permit us to absorb this increased cost, we are forced to advance the retail price of milk to 11 cents per quart."

The retail increase becomes effective today, Rosenfeld added. Other Washington dairies raised prices from 13 to 14 cents per quart. Their action followed a District Supreme Court decision invalidating the AAA milk marketing agreement, an order which would have placed production of the product under Federal control.

Meanwhile, organized consumers acting through the Washington Consumers' Council, plan an appeal to the District Commissioners for suspension of Health Department regulations which prohibit the importation of milk from other sections of the country.

Despite the retail increase, consumption of milk has not been affected, according to B. B. Derrick, treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Producers Association. Distributions by leading dairies have not decreased since the new price was ordered, he said.

Prizes Are Offered At Dance Tonight

No more than 50 per cent of the candidates in today's elections can hope to win, but there will be no such narrow ratio at tonight's Brotherhood-Sisterhood dinner dance in the Mayflower Hotel.

A large number of prizes, nearly enough to take care of all the dancers, will be awarded, according to Sidney Lust, chairman of the entertainment committee. They include clothing, jewelry, shoes, groceries, cosmetics and even hair waves. Also there will be tickets to Warner Bros. Earle Theater and Loew's Capitol Theater.

Election returns, supplied by The Post, will be announced at intervals. The dance, which is given annually for the benefit of the Sabbath School of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will start at 10 p. m. Music will be furnished by Sidney's Orchestra, and dinner will be served at midnight.

THE POST'S New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

Mr. Sam Boston, America's most distinguished betting commissioner, has placed more election bets this year than any other person in the country.

"I'm nonpartisan," he stated, "and don't care a damn who wins. The only thing I'm for is Right Figures" . . . Mr. Boston, therefore, has been conducting his own election poll for the last few months, ever since the Literary Digest figures had aroused his suspicions . . . "They got 2,000,000 answers from 10,000,000 postcards they sent," he explained. "I didn't send any postcards. I went straight to the other 40,000,000 voters." . . . He conducted his poll by contacting important personages every day, in every important city in the country . . . His figures, admittedly generous toward Landon, given the Republican nominee 170 electoral votes, with 361 votes for Roosevelt.

• • • •

According to the Digest Poll, Landon should win California . . . Sam Boston offers 4 to 1 that he doesn't . . . Illinois is given to Landon by almost two to one. Boston offers 6 to 5 that Roosevelt wins that State . . . The Digest gives New York to Landon. Same has 2 to 1 the poll is wrong there . . . As for Oregon, which the Digest also gives to Landon, Boston is offering 2 to 1 on Roosevelt . . . In every State where the Digest shows the contest close, the betting commissioner offers 3-to-1 odds . . . According to his diligent investigation, Landon, with the best breaks, can win only Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

• • • •

Some of the Digest officers describe the poll as "our $500,000 headache." The only returns were $75,000, paid by the Goodyear company, and 150,000 added circulation. This is disappointing, as previous polls had added 250,000 to the circulation . . . A Digest staff member yesterday admitted to me that they made a mistake in sending their cards to names appearing on the old subscription list. "We should have used a different list," the official confided "as the present one is strictly upper bracket income class. We lost sight of the fact that this election would be on an economic basis. Frankly, we haven't got so much confidence in the poll, either.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Nov. 3.

Tom Brown the actor, for all his 18 histrionic years, is still a very young man. Perhaps that explains why his mother not long ago exercised the parental right to give her boy a surprise party. She did it up right, too, inviting all the old friends whose names she had heard Tom mention over a period of years.

DIXIE DUNBAR

The party proved the most embarrassing moment of his young life, for Mrs. Brown in her zealousness to make the affair complete, had invited all of Tom's former girl friends. Since he is quite romantic, there were a large number of young ladies present.

Gertrude Niesen's favorite story on herself harks back to her early days on radio. She was the singing star of a program sponsored by a drug manufacturer. One night a company executive attended a broadcast carrying an elaborately wrapped package. "My dear," he purred, "we want you to accept this in gratitude for your great success." Thrilled by visions of no less than a fur coat, Miss Nieson opened the gift. It was a big tin box filled with fancily wrapped packages of the sponsor's commercial products.

Boulevard window shopping: Rosalind Russell refuses to believe any one set of penny scales; she weighs on all she spies when she walks the main stem. James Stewart is a loiterer; any street barker or excavation can hold him for minutes.

A scene in Warner Baxter's current film called upon him to race past a full-grown lioness, seize her cub from a box and set it on the ground so it could run to its mother. Warner sensed danger, and voiced his thought. "Aw, nuthin' can happen," said the trainer. "All you're doin' is settin' the baby on the ground so's it can run to its mama." "Yeah, I know that," argued Baxter, "but does the mama?"

A nice touch of humor may be found in this story about Dixie Dunbar and Carl Laemmle, jr. He is quite the ladies' man (according to publicity) and he considered Dixie a conquest. They attended a nite spot one evening and near 10 o'clock she complained of a headache and asked to be taken home. Junior complied, but after making delivery he parked half-block away to await developments.

Soon his suspicions were justified; another car paused in front of the house, Dixie hopped in, the car moved away. Young Laemmle followed to a secluded night club, waited until Miss Dunbar and her escort No. 2 had time to seat themselves, then walked in, calmly said hello and marched right out another door.

'Libeled Lady', Boasting Five Filmland Notables, Proves to Be Invigorating Bit of Farcical Nonsense

Preview Shows Plot Lacks Sanity, But It Packs Hilarious Fun; William Powell Is at Best as Comedian; Many Theaters Will Extend Closing Time for Election Results.

AS WAS to have been expected of any film comedy boasting five such admirable players as William Powell, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy and Walter Connolly, "Libeled Lady" turned out to be an invigorating interval of farcical nonsense when it was previewed by the drama desks in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange Sunday night.

BELL.

The yarn, which boasts almost as many authors as Heinz has pickles, adds up to nothing in the least sane, but it is hilarious fun. Although he has essayed serious roles times without number, William Powell is above all else a comedian. Those whose memories find it possible to hark back to his association with Richard Barthelmess in the first of his starring vehicles for Inspiration Pictures, will recall that Powell always was the comic, Anders Randolf or Tyrone Power the heavy and either Dorothy Gish or Dorothy Mackaill the heroine. Thos early Barthelmess vehicles followed a fixed formula based on the idea of "Jack, the Giant Killer."

But getting back to Bill Powell, in "Libeled Lady" he reverts to the sort of impersonation that first brought him fame and a taste of fortune. In one scene, as a perfect tyro, who knows nothing about the sport beyond the fact that one must perforce have a rod and a line and maybe a reel, Mr. Powell goes trout fishing. That one sequence is enough to "put the picture over," for when the trout hooks Mr. Powell there ensues a quick succession of incidents that are distinctly and irrevocably slap-stick, but very, very funny. Mr. Powell takes an awful licking from the kingfish of the stream, for which skilled anglers have been casting for years. You will howl at the incompetency of the man and Miss Loy's unsportsmanlike willingness to net the catch before he has fought his fight and completely drowned the gentleman who had brought him to gaff.

Then there are the Jean Harlow person and that Tracy fellow to add to the fun. For instance, you will get a laugh when Miss Harlow drops a key down the front of her waist and it "clanks" like the gong on a trolley car. There are other not too subtle touches that lend this item a comedy kick that will delight everyone but the habituated grouches and hypochondriacs. But then, there is nothing much you can do about them, anyway, so what?

Manager Gene Ford, of Loew's Capitol, who sat directly in front of me at the screening, summarized the thing succinctly when he remarked after the final fadeout that this feature of the bill at the Palace, come Thursday, "has more twists than a roller coaster." Precisely.

Save for one or two deviations from the uniformly high caliber of its subject matter and treatment, "Libeled Lady" is smart comedy that deserves to be decorated with a multiple-star rating in any man's catalogue of screen hits. A conservative guess would be that you will eat it up when it is unfurled for public scrutiny on Thursday—as against the customary Friday by latest announcement.

Mrs. Gene Ford, "Kay" to a host of friends on accounta because her name happens to be Catherine, also was present at the "Libeled Lady" preview, having returned from an absence of many weeks in St. Louis only on Saturday morning. You will be able to identify her by the feather in her swanky bonnet—a trig but deadly gadget that probably will put your eye out if you forget to duck.

While the daily schedule of performances will not be seriously impaired in any of the picture houses, either downtown or residential, today, there will be extensions of the programs in virtually all of the film theaters. These extended last shows will be carried until midnight, or later, by which time it is believed something definite in the way of election results may be available.

It will be the purpose of every amusement place to keep its audiences posted by latest bulletins on the election supplied by the most reliable sources available—newspaper wires, radio and private advices.

It is my understanding that no special plans have been made for the Metropolitan and Columbia Theaters. The Warner and Loew interests will care for their publics in the Earle, Capitol and Palace, respectively.

Angie Ratto, come Friday, will be celebrating another anniversary—a couple of them as a matter of fact. Not only will the "mayor of F street" be observing the umpty-steenth birthday of his employment by the Loew's interests, but he also will be celebrating the severalth anniversary of the opening of the Palace, where he now presides as manager—the eighteenth, I believe. However, Angie is not the only veteran in point of service with the Loewcal Loew organization—Doorman Nick Toscano was hired by Nicholas Schenck the very day the Palace was opened. Mrs. Lillie Cleves, supervisor of cleaners, likewise has been with the theater since the first opening of its doors. Electricians Walter Collins and J. R. Wood also belong to the 18-year club, having been there since the lights first flashed on in 1918. Stanley Barlupm, the Palace's genial assistant manager, is the baby of the veterans' association, having been on duty at Thirteenth and F for a mere matter of eight years.

Congratulations and personal gratitude to all concerned for many courtesies extended through the years. A fine body of men.

Signs of the Times.

That sudden change in bookings at Loew's Capitol for this week-end, which brings in "Ladies in Love," with Constance Bennett, Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young and Simone Simon, instead of "Tarzan Escapes," suggests another of those double-bill, marquee signs. You guessed it:

"TARZAN ESCAPES"
"LADIES IN LOVE"

After a long absence—one that dates back to Dan Totheroh's "Distant Drums," at the Belasco, if memory serves—Pauline Lord visits us again in the stellar role of Max Gordon's production of "Ethan Frome," currently being presented at the National. The play is a dramatization of the Edith Wharton novel and has Earl Larimore in the role opposite the star—the name part it is—created in New York last season by Raymond Massey, whose only recent appearance locally was in the film version of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come."

Edith Wharton Novel Made Basis of Realistic Drama

By Nelson B. Bell.

"ETHAN FROME." Max Gordon presents Pauline Lord in Owen and Donald Davis' dramatization of the Edith Wharton novel of the same name in prologue, three acts and ten scenes; suggested by a previous dramatization by Lowell Barrington. Staged by Karl Nielson.

With that relentless sort of realism that made James A. Herne's New England drama of "Shore Acres" one of the finest examples of American playwriting extant, "Ethan Frome" takes its place as one of the brilliantly expository modern dramas dealing with a remote and little known segment of native life.

The Davises, father and son, seem to have a peculiar penchant for the depiction of New England life as it really might be lived. "Icebound," a Pulitzer prize winner, may be accepted as an evidence of this ability to capture the spirit and the viewpoint of the genuine "Down East" life and environment. They have added to their distinguished record in the present work.

There has been a great economy of what have been termed the "commodities of the theater" in the fabrication of this sheer study in clashing personalities in the "spruce country" of the snow-banked land of brutal winters. The major clash is between the hypochondriac wife of a simple New England farmer and the "blood cousin," who comes to serve as "hired girl," without pay.

There is built up between these two a conflict that epitomizes the age-old battle between the forces of romance and the imaginary ills of a nature dedicated to bogus afflictions and self-pity. The issue is so clearly and forcefully drawn that there is never any doubt of the dramatic integrity of the play. It is one of those grim and completely convincing revelations that leave no room for quibbling. The thing is to all intents and purposes reality. And this effect is achieved by the minimum utilization of players. A great deal of the time, during the action of the great number of scenes that have been staged with his usual impeccable taste by Max Gordon, there are no more than two characters involved. These are more apt than not to be either Earle Larimore and Pauline Lord or Earle Larimore and Dorothy Mathews.

Miss Mathews Triumphs.

Mr. Larimore plays with a little indecision now and again and isn't too well heard some of the time throughout the house, but his occasional lapses into a flagrant inaudibility are largely compensated for by the excellence of the performance contributed to the play by its star, Pauline Lord, and Dorothy Mathews in the secondary feminine role.

And yet, I do not know why I use the word "secondary" in Miss Mathews' case. Her role really is the most important in the play. The drama's entire motivation springs from this part.

After a year, or thereabouts, in New York last season, it is small wonder that the present enactment of a sterling play is well-nigh flawless. In addition to the three principals already acclaimed, Edwin Redding, as Jotham, does an uncommonly fine piece of work.

The frigid and snowy drama is simply staged, and acted with that fine adherence to actuality that establishes it at once as one of the most worthy, if one of the least enlivened, of the current season's contributions to the roster of stage offerings that may not be ignored without a definite loss to one's rounded view of a season that so far has been prolific in works of definite dramatic importance. See "Ethan Frome," by all means, if you place any premium whatever upon excellence.

Blackfriars

"THE RISEN GENERATION." The Blackfriars Guild presents the comedy-drama in three acts by the Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P., directed by Angela Keir with stage setting designed and constructed by the Guild. At Saint Paul's Hall, November 2, 3 and 4. Reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Forthrightly presented, as have been all their productions, the Blackfriars Guild last evening opened its 1936-37 season with "The Risen Generation."

From the pen of the Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P., comes this rather inconsequential comedy-drama of the triumph of youth in emergencies, and in the light of Father Nagle's earlier Passion play, "Barter," and ecclesiastic "Catherine the Valiant," the current offering stands especially prominent because of the radical departure in the playwright's method.

Ostensibly devoid of a "message"—although a discerning preacher might find material therein for a sermon—"The Risen Generation" is the simple story of the rising of the Taylor family to the occasion precipitated by the bankruptcy of the paterfamilias and his coincident nervous breakdown. Love and romance play their parts, of course, and a strong, though pleasing, thread of satirical wit courses the narrative.

Constance Haug, making her debut in this production, is the older daughter who expertly steps into the breach and furnishes the love interest. She at first seems to be miscast, but, as she proceeds into the more emotional portions of the play, reveals a keen sense of dramatic values.

Opposite Miss Haug is Stephen A. Trodden, as a young sociologist, whose clinical experiment changes to love, only to be temporarily spoiled when the truth is learned. But it all works out in the end.

Robert Dillon is the catalyst for the sundry ramifications of plot. Mary Black and Edgar M. Ford were the parents. Others in the cast included Margaret M. Myers, Leo Brady, Jack Kelly, Gerald Gregg, Julian Zier, Kathleen Crowley, Jud Black and the Washington Daily News' Gordon V. Potter.

The direction of Angela Keir was fine, and the Guilders did a grand job on the single setting.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

Harla moved over to the bunk and sat on the edge of it, trying to get courage to snuff the candle and lie down. Fresh in her ears, Flood's earnest talk of a few minutes ago kept flouncing in and out of the turmoil of her mind. His talk had given her a deep look into the man himself, and what she saw there dealt her one of the profoundest shocks of her 25 years. Hitherto she had regarded Flooo as a thoroughly vicious and inhuman person, but now she perceived that he was all too human and that the motives driving him were widespread in the society from which he sprang.

His thirst for a "cool, clean million" was identical with the thirst which she had seen in scores of men. Her own brother Jimmy had been afflicted with it and had lost his life because of it. If that thirst had led Flood to crime, it had also led other men to a blind sacrifice of precious values and to careers essentially predatory even if they were within the law.

And Flood's personal vanity, his desire to be a "big shot" in the eyes of other people, especially of women—he shared that vanity and desire with half the men she knew.

What had his thirsts and motives brought him? Even though he had been successful beyond the dreams of the ordinary criminal, his way of life had burned out with him and he was unspeakably weary of it. His prowling and light-o'-loves had likewise burned out. He wanted a settled life and one woman's love. After a career of crime he was trying to sneak back into the company of decent men.

In a little while she forced herself to lie down on the bunk; but she removed Flood's sleeping poke, and left the candle burning. The whisper of wind around the eaves, the creaking of the lodegpole rafters, the flickering shadows against the walls, preyed so badly on her tired imagination that she could not bear the dark.

As she lay quiet, thinking, she prayed that Noel really had been arrested and taken to Fort James, as Flood said. If Noel was free, he would come after her. Against Flood's formidable outfit he stood no chance. They would kill him, as they had killed Jimmy. He probably knew this perfectly well but he would come anyway. He was of that sort. After all her repeated snubbings, her cruel suspicions, and then that visit to the way cabin, he still would gamble with his life to save her.

What hurt her the worst, as she looked back across those stormy weeks with Noel, was the fact that just when he had desperately needed her friendship, she had completely failed him. In his love for her there had been a kind of hunger which tugged at her when she thought about it now. He had never had the friends and golden freedom and rich associations that she had had. For a period half the span of her lifetime, Noel had been a shadow, living and associating with men of the shadows. In the line of duty he had been gangster, dope runner on the coast, silk smuggler, foreign operative. He had been everything that one could think of, and he had been sent everywhere, from Shanghai to the European capitals. Homeless, uprooted, he had lived a harsh, austere life, with hardly one real friend on human contact.

And then, she had failed him. A splendid chance had been given her of all the people Noel had ever met. She could have been a kind of emotional haven to him, after those shadow years. But she had been blind to that chance and had flung it away.

Into her weary thoughts, as she was sinking toward sleep, crept a whisper, low and hollow, coming from nowhere, mingling with the eerie sibilance of the wind.

"Harla!"

The whisper jarred her wide awake. It frightened her so much she dared not look around or even open her eyes.

The whisper came again, cautious but impatient. "Harla!" And then: "For heaven's sake, come alive, girl! D'you hear me?"

She sat bolt upright and stared wildly around the cabin, trying to locate the source of that hollow whisper.

Harla looked at the window and saw the glitter of a knife blade. Slowly, noiselessly, the knife was working down along a side of the casement, cutting the parchment out of a single pane.

"Noel——?"

"Quiet! There's a man five steps from your door, Snuff that candle and tiptoe over here."

The sound of Noel's voice, the knowledge that he had come for her and was with her again, sent a wild surge of joy through Harla. With trembling hands she lifted the candle and blew it out, and then tiptoed hastily across the dark cabin.

"Are you alone, Noel?"

"Yes." He slit the last few inches of the parchment and lifted it from the window. "You can squeeze through, now. I'll help you. No noise—your guard, around there, is an Indian."

For all her gladness over Noel's coming and all her wish to be with him, Harla hung back. If he tried to get her away, he would pay for it with his life; and the mere thought of his getting killed made her panicky.

"Noel, I can't let you do this, she objected, in whispers. "I can't let them kill you, and that's what'll happen. Flood's got nine men here——"

"And I've got a whole paltoon! Don't worry about me. Come on."

"A platoon? You just said you were by yourself."

"Don't waste time arguing. Here, give me your hand."

Harla refused. "Noel, please. Please go away while you still can. I'm safe enough. Flood has treated me decently."

"What's that? Safe? With him? Good Lord, what's gone the matter with you, girl Have you let a bit of initial suavity blind you? If you won't come for your own sake, come for mine. You can do me a supreme favor, if you will."

"What?"

"Let's get clear of this cabin, and I'll tell you about it."

She gave in, and for a moment, as he helped her through the narrow windows, she was in his arms. That moment brought her flashes of the times in the Grand Marais when he had comforted her and buoyed her up. She remembered the touch of his lips upon her hair, and she half expected him to kiss her now, if only because they were together again, partners against Flood's men. But he did not. Even her whisper of gratitude and her squeeze on his arm, as he stood her down, went unanswered.

He reached for a rifle leaning againts the logs and handed it to her, with an extra clip of cartridges.

"Here. You likely won't need this, but you'll feel better by having it."

"But you haven't any gun."

"I've my automatic—and that platoon. Let's be traveling."

In cautious silence they started down the winding trail toward the cliff.

"I could hardly believe it when I saw you down there at the supper fire." Noel remarked to the silent footed girl beside him. "Why hasn't Flood taken you away, Harla?"

"He's had no chance yet. His canoe party got here with me late this evening."

"You mean last evening."

"No, this evening. You see, at the start of that trip they tied me up, but they got tired of carrying me across those long hard totes, and they let me walk, and I watched my chance and made a break. I was half way back to the Dinokui island before they caught me again, 20 hours later. If it hadn't been for that Indian teacher, they wouldn't ever have caught me."

Miss Hopkins Rites Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Miss Alice B. Hopkins, retired member of the business department of Mount Vernon Seminary, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hines' undertaking establishment, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Miss Hopkins, who was 77, died Sunday at the home of her niece, Mrs. J. J. Skinner, 7217 Blair road northwest. She had been ill for the past year and a half.

Born in Mount Clinton, Va., Miss Hopkins spent her early life there, coming to Washington in 1891 to live with her brother, the late F. D. Hopkins. She retired in 1935 from her position at Mount Vernon Seminary, where she had worked for 28 years.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Skinner, are a brother, W. R. Hopkins, of Bentonville, Ark.; another niece, Mrs. W. R. Douglas, of Takoma Park, an a nephew, F. J. Hopkins, also of Takoma Park.

$266,336 Is Mailed To Farmers by AAA

By the Associated Press.

Spokesmen for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration said yesterday that 3,320 checks for $266,336 had been mailed to farm owners and operators to date under the 1936 soil conservation program which calls for distribution of $470,000,000 to some 6,000,000 persons.

Payments were reported in ten different States. New York topped the list with 1,350 for $104,743. Pennsylvania ranked second with 975 checks for $93,575 and Iowa third with 351 checks for $31,892.

Other payments reported were: Connecticut, 97 checks for $9,413; Delaware, 169 for $9,127; Vermont, 108 for $6,234; Maine, 114 for $3,799; Tennessee, 87 for $3,783; North Carolina, 61 for $3,129; Mississippi, 8 for $541.

The average for the payments reported was slightly more than $80.

2 Suits Challenge '36 Exchange Act

By the Associated Press.

Two cases challenging the constitutionality of the 1936 act regulating commodity exchanges were filed yesterday in the Supreme Court.

One was presented by William S. Moore in behalf of himself and other members of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The other was submitted by several members of the Chicago Board of Trade.

$605,810 Receipts For Coughlin Unit

By the Associated Press.

The National Union for Social Justice yesterday reported receipts of $605,810 and expenditures of $587,832 for the campaign to date. The union is headed by the Rev. Charles Coughlin.

The Michigan division of the organization listed receipts of $5,137 and expenditures of $5,064 in its report to the Clerk of the House.

The Republican National Finance Committee of Southern California filed a report showing total receipts of $270,027 and expenditures of $259,041. It listed among its principal contributors Earl C. Anthony, of Los Angeles, who gave $5,750; Dwight Murphy, of Santa Barbara, $5,000; Keith Spaulding, of Pasadena, $5,000, and Harry Chandler, of Los Angeles, $5,000.

The Republican Central Committee of Los Angeles County showed contributions totaling $14,990 and expenditures of $12,414. Lee A. Phillips, of Los Angeles, gave $500.

Wildcats Top Nation's Grid Rankings

Northwestern's Victims Still Highly Regarded; Fordham Third.

Army Drops From Sixth to 21st; Yale, Tigers, Cross Not Rated.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 2.—In a battle of ballots almost as fiercely fought as their struggles in the mud at Evanston, Northwestern displaced Minnesota today as the No. 1 college team in the national football ranking poll conducted by the Associated Press.

Majority support was swayed by the Wildcats' 6-0 triumps that snapped the Gopher's winning streak, but many experts apparently were not satisfied as to Northwestern's superiority, all things considered, and voted their opinions accordingly. As one expressed it: "Without taking anything away from Northwestern, I still think Minnesota is the better club."

Notwithstanding the mixture of sentiment 31 of the 43 contributors to this week's poll rated Northwestern at the top of their "first ten" to give the Wildcats a total of 412 points.

Ten experts rated Minnesota No. 1, with the Gophers taking second place in the consensus with a total of 371 points. The other two place votes went to Fordham's Rams, who jumped to third place in the national standing.

The rankings, with points (scored on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis):

	Points
1. Northwestern	412
2. Minnesota	371
3. Fordham	227
4. Marquette	212
5. Pittsburgh	191
6. Washington	181
7. Louisiana State	168
8. Nebraska	165
9. Santa Clara	145
10. Tulane	93
11. Southern California	76
12. Southern Methodist	40
13. Notre Dame	17
14. Alabama	16
15. Duke and Pennsylvania	10
17. Washington State	8
18. Dartmouth and Tennessee	4
20. Auburn	3

Despite a general impression of inconsistency created by last Saturday's tremendous wave of upsets, the week's ranking list reveals a steady upward curve for a majority of the top flight.

Northwestern has rated 4-3-1 in the three polls taken by the Associated Press. Fordham and Marquette made the most striking advances, the Rams showing 15-9-3 and Marquette 20-10-4 for three successive weeks.

3 Players Dropped By Hunk Anderson

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 2.—Coach Hunk Anderson of N. C. State College today dropped Jess Tatum, regular right end; Howard Bardes, star backfield man, and Odell Smothers, relief center, from his football squad but declined to say why.

"The men have been directed to turn in their uniforms but I won't talk about it or say why," Hunk replied to questions. "It was done for the best interests of the team."

Boy Rides Bike Forty Miles to Cheer Team

Boone, N. C., Nov. 2 (AP).—Bill Clark, 15-year-old high school youth, is such a loyal supporter of the undefeated and untied Appalachian State College football team that he rides his bicycle over the rugged 40 miles of mountain road between his home at Lansing and Boone to see the Mountaineers play each Saturday.

Ga. Tech vs. Penn.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Georgia Tech's basketball team will meet the University of Pennsylvania here on February 1, H. Jamison Swarts, Penn director of athletics, announced today.

Camera Story of Hectic Battle Between Buck Everett and Bob Olin

Del Vecchio—Post Staff.

Top, Buck Everett has just risen from a nine-count in the third round with his right eye completely closed. He rams home a terrific left hook, which staggers Olin just at the bell. Right, Everett answers the bell for the fourth with a wild right swing. It misses. Buck is propelled to the floor by his own momentum. His seconds toss in the towel. Olin wins by a technical knockout.

Northwestern's Troubles Just Beginning

Coach Waldorf Happy But Worried Over Troubles Coming Ahead.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Northwestern's gridiron plum is "hanging ripe from the bough, ready for the knock-off."

That was the feeling today of Lynn Waldorf, the man who coaches the team that stunned the football world by ending mighty Minnesota's reign. Calm and serene through the first five games of the Wildcat schedule—all of them, even Minnesota, taken as they came—Waldorf admitte today that a full set of worries had caught up with him since Saturday.

"Now we really are in a spot," he rumbled this morning as he listened to volley after volley of cheers from a huge celebration of the triumph over the Gophers.

"As fast as a team has gotten up there this fall, it has been licked. It has been that way all over the country. Now, maybe our turn is coming. It looks as though we are hanging ripe from the bough, ready for the knock-off."

"I didn't worry much after the season started," he said. "I didn't think we had much chance of getting this far without at least two beatings, and just went along hoping for the best. But now that we have defated Minnesota, I have plenty of worries.

Wisconsin, Michigan and Notre Dame, our last three opponents, will be out there playing their heads off to beat the team that beat Minnesota. Wisconsin has played spotty football, but has the stuff to become tough. Michigan has power and may get going against us. Notre Dame showed huge improvement Saturday in beating Ohio State."

"All the scoring against us has been done on passes or long runs, but not through our line—or rather our two lines, for one has operated just as well as the other."

The victory celebration was the biggest in Northwestern's history. There was no formal dismissal of classes, but no one answered present. Self-appointed guards, entirely unnecessary, picketed the campus to steer anyone with thoughts of pursuing knowledge, away from classrooms. Another precaution, also wasted, was the nailing closed of a number of classroom doors.

President Walter Drill Scott suggested mildly that "at least the football team should be allowed to attend classes" and retired.

Guckeyson, Maryland, May Be Out for Year

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The prospects of a Guckeyson-less team for the remainder of the season knocked the bottom out of Maryland's gridiron hopes yesterday as it commenced preparations for Saturday's game with Richmond in the Spiders' bailiwick.

Wracked with pain and barely able to run on his injured leg, which abruptly curtailed his playing earlier in the season and for a time threatened to end his career, Guckeyson played only a part of the Florida game, and even then was not at his best. Once he was out in the open, off on what ordinarily would have been a touchdown run for him, but the leg almost gave way under him and he was easily caught from behind.

Guckeyson suffered a reoccurence of the injury playing against Virginia but refused to quit, nor did he tell the coaches of it. Again last Thursday the leg went bad, but the boy stolidly refused to quit, and not until he was removed from the Florida game did the coaches learn of it.

"Gike," in all probability will not start against Richmond, nor will he be used until his leg is absolutely sound even if necessary to keep him on the side lines the rest of the season. The main objective now will be to have him ready for the "homecoming" game against V. M. I. at College Park the week after next.

But Guckeyson isn't the only cripple on the squad. "Jumbo Jim" Meade has two bad knees, Coleman Headly is nursing another bad knee; Blair Smith is out for two weeks with a couple of cracked ribs, and Vic Willis is scheduled to undergo an examination for appendictis today. The loss of any one of these men would affect the team like one of Ivan Nedomatsky's left-hooks connecting with an opponnet's jaw.

At Georgetown, Coach Jack Hagerty read the riot act to his prima donnas and suited his words to action with one of the longest and hardest scrimmages the Hilltoppers have experienced this season. He topped it all off with a few changes in the line-up, which may be permanent.

Maury Nee replaced Noonan at end; Elmer Moulin called signals in Tom Keating's stead, and Jim Dooley replaced Bil Duff at fullback. Nolan and Valliquette occupied the halfback posts. Ed Bodine and Hank Gibbons, end and halfback, respectively, who caught Hagerty's eye in the Shenandoah game, were moved to No. 2 assignments, true to Hagerty's promise to promote men whose work against the Virginians warranted it.

Jack Fleming, the team's best punter, and Joe Keegin, one of its best ball-carriers, are back in harness and probably will be ready for the West Virginia game Saturday. Both will be thoroughly tested in scrimmage tomorrow. Clem Stralka, who also has been on the injured list, is expected back to the wars tomorrow.

Things are none too bright at Catholic University as the Cards stretched their legs after returning from their disastrous invasion of the Southland. With West Virginia Wesleyan coming up this week-end "Dutch" Bergman must find an end who can give that position some expert attention. Fred Rogers is out for the season with a bad knee although still with the squad and still practicing. He can't get around fast enough to suit Bergman, and if hit hard by an offensive halfback will not last very long.

Shaw Leading 'Debutante' Grid Pilots

By the Associated Press.

Of the two dozen "debutante" football coaches who hit the pigskin trail a month or so ago, only Lawrence (Buck) Shaw, of Santa Clara, guides an unbeaten team into November.

New mentors at Duquesne, Tulane, Tennessee and Villanova also have earned bows for the performances of their teams, even though their records are not perfect.

A year ago Shaw was an assistant at Santa Clara, aide to Maurice J. Smith. The winter shifts among gridiron pilots saw Smith move east to Villanova and Shaw boosted into the post at Santa Clara.

Smith's Villanova team, which had won over Detroit, Penn State, Boston U., Western Maryland and Penn Military, finally hit the skids Saturday, surprised by Bucknell, 6 to 0, but the Santa Clarans carried on.

Shaw's Californians whipped Auburn, one of the South's best, 12 to 0, for their fifth triumph. Their other victims have been Stanford, Portland, San Francisco and San Jose.

Purdue - Fordham Game Is the Other Outstanding Intersectional Test.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—The Purdue-Fordham and Notre Dame-Navy games feature a flock of intersectional collisions this week in the East and Midwest, while conference warfare commands the spotlight on other fronts.

The pressure lets down temporarily for the Nation's three remaining unbeaten and untied major elevens. Northwestern, conqueror of mighty Minnesota has a comparative breather in weak Wisconsin. Marquette engages little Creighton, and Santa Clara rests in preparation for next week's brawl with St. Mary's.

East—In addition to the Purdue-Fordham and Notre Dame-Navy melees, four other interesting intersectional tilts are on tap; Michigan-Pennsylvania, North Carolina State-Boston College, Virginia-Harvard and Kentucky-Manhattan. Holy Cross will try a comeback against Colgate, conqueror of Army. Other matches bring together Pittsburgh-Penn State, Army-Muhlenberg, Yale-Brown, Princeton-Cornell, Dartmouth-Columbia, Carnegie Tech-New York U., Georgetown-West Virginia and Catholic U.-West Virginia Wesleyan.

Midwest—In the Big Ten, Minnesota hits the comeback trail against Iowa, Conference leader Northwestern plays Wisconsin, and Ohio State meets Chicago. In the Big Six, Conference Leader Nebraska tangles with Kansas, and Oklahoma meets Kansas State. Five intersectional games pair Temple-Michigan State, Syracuse-Indiana, Denver-Drake, Bucknell-Detroit, and on Friday, Washington U. of St. Louis vs. Duquesne.

South—In the Southeastern Conference, leading Louisiana State engages Mississippi State, while four other games pair Alabama-Tulane, Florida-Georgia, Georgia Tech-Auburn and Vanderbilt-Sewanee. In the Southern Conference, four games bring together North Carolina-Davidson, Clemson-Citadel, Virginia Poly-Washington and Lee, and Virginia Military-William and Mary. In addition Villanova tries a comeback against South Carolina, Duke plays Wake Forest, Tennessee has a breather in Maryville, and Mississippi engages Loyola of the South.

Pacific Coast—Conference leader Washington meets Stanford; Washington State tangles with Oregon State; Southern California has a big game with California, and Oregon plays U. C. L. A. In addition, St. Mary's returns from an unsuccessful Eastern trip to meet Idaho.

Southwest—Three conference engagements pair Texas A. & M.-Southern Methodist; Arkansas-Rice, and Texas Christian-Texas. Outside the conference, Tulsa tangles with Centenary and Baylor meets Oklahoma City.

Goose Goslin Rescues 2 Men Adrift in Boat

By the Associated Press.

Salem, N. J., Nov. 2.—Leon ("Goose") Goslin, veteran outfielder of the Detroit American League baseball team, rescued two men adrift 12 hours in a disabled boat on the Delaware River today.

The men, David Lawrence, jr., and his brother, Norman, 26, of Bridgeton, N. J., were found drifting 12 miles from Salem.

The rescuers had set out early this morning after Coast Guard boats had failed to locate the Lawrence brothers. Neither suffered any ill effects from the experience.

He was a familiar figure on the Potomac River in fast speed craft similar to the one in which the Lawrence brothers were rescued.

Another hobby, which he follows between baseball seasons, is farming. It is this hobby which put him on the scene of the rescue, where he has a large farm near Salem, his birthplce, upon which he spends much of his time when not campaigning on the diamond.

Goslin's daring on the diamond is perhaps as great as his recklessness in speedboats and automobiles. Always a "money player" he has long been noted for his ability to play best in the pinches.

In 1928 he led the American League in batting, but slumped the next two years, which caused his transfer to St. Louis, from whence he was traded to Detroit.

Goslin was a hero of a different sort in 1935, when his splendid playing in crucial moments was largely responsible for the Tigers winning the World Series from the Chicago Cubs.

Navy Drilling on Plays for Notre Dame

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 2.—Fully aware of the task ahead the Naval Academy football coaching staff today began grooming the Navy team for the game with Notre Dame Saturday in the Baltimore stadium.

The Navy players who faced Pennsylvania saw motion pictures of the Navy-Penn game and then worked on new plays for use against Notre Dame. Tom Hamilton, head coach, sent the players who did not get in the game through a scrimmage.

The coaching staff wasted no regrets over the Navy's 16-6 loss to the Quakers. They pointed out that the upsets this season have shown that almost anything can happen when two good teams meet.

"Last Saturday Pennsylvania was the best team we had seen this season," Hamilton said. "They played a nice game. We think Navy played a pretty good game."

Under Handicap.

The Navy team which faced Penn was handicapped by injuries in its most vulnerable part, Hamilton being forced to send the team on the field with third and fourth string centers. John D. Jiller, varsity center, who was given anti-tetanus serum after cutting his hand, is still in the hospital and may not be available next Saturday.

Richard V. Fincher, alternate for Miller, is recovering from an injured shoulder. Hamilton sent him against Penn to block the hole in the Navy line, although he was not in the best of condition. He should be available for Notre Dame.

Hamilton will work this week to improve the Navy passing attack. Two Navy forward passes were tossed into the hands of Pennsylvania players and the coaching staff has decided to do something about it by improving the marksmanship of the passers.

Louis-Risko Battle Due in Cleveland

Ed Bang Will Promote Show December 7.

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Joe Louis is to make his next ring start on December 7 against Johnny Risko in a 10-rounder in the Cleveland Auditorium.

Terms have been agreed on and Ed Bang, Cleveland sports editor, who will promote the show, will come here Friday to sign contracts with Mike Jacobs.

Jacobs said he is negotiating to have the Brown Bomber appear in Detroit and Chicago later in the winter and either in the Hippodrome or Madison Square Garden in New York in February or March.

Hook to Eye Is Big Blow Of Battle

By Bill McCormick.

The victim of one of the suddenest shifts in the tide of battle ever recorded in the prize ring, District Heavyweight Champion Buck Everett was knock out by former World Light-heavyweight Champion Bob Olin in the fourth round of a brutal brawl at Turner's Arena last night.

A capacity crowd of about 2,000 watched the scheduled 10-round fuss come to an official conclusion after 15 seconds of the fourth round when Everett's manager, Jimmy Erwin, sent a towel fluttering into the fighting pit in a token of surrender.

Hardly a person in the arena but knew that the fight was over in the third round when Everett, with a nice lead tucked under his belt, was floored by a left hook to the head that traveled a scant 6 inches and was as vicious as it was short.

Buck's Eye Is Closed.

Buck wobbled about a bit, then collapsed flat on his back. In the brief period that it took Referee Muggsy Morris to toll off a count of nine and Everett to drag himself erect, Buck's right eye almost completely closed.

On legs as weak and fragile as those of a week-old colt, Everett reeled grotesquely around the ring, swinging one desperate haymaker after another in the general direction of his antagonist, whom he could hardly see. A terrific left hook found its mark on Olin's chin and the former ruler of the 175-pound division almost went down at the bell.

Everett groped his way back to his corner, still almost insensible and by now completely blind in his right eye. At the bell for the fourth, Everett tore out with one ferocious, wild right upon which he staked all his hopes. It missed by feet and Buck was carried to the canvas by his own momentum.

Led Back to Handlers.

Anguish and disappointment written in every line of his Jack Dempseyish features, Everett pounded on the canvas with both leather-encased mittens in hopeless despair. Came the towel from his corner just as Everett rose, but the fighting heart of the stricken fighter made him protest vehemently as he was led back to his handlers, still wobbly and more than half blind.

Boxing commission physicians said after the bout that the blow in the third round had caused a

Braddock Booked To Meet Bostonian

Bout Slated November 16 in New Orleans.

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 2 (AP).—Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock will meet Jack McCarthy, Boston heavy, in a 6-round exhibition at New Orleans, La., November 16, Joe Gould, the titleholder's manager, announced today.

It will be the first ring appearance for Braddock since he canceled a title bout with Max Schmeling, of Germany, because of an arthritic hand. Braddock has been receiving treatment for the injured fist here for the past two weeks.

Most Thrilling Finish of the Maryland Horse Racing Season

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Four noses poking for the wire in yesterday's feature race at Pimlico opened. Crossbow II (with blazed nose) was declared the winner after the judges consulted the pictures. Night Play (closest to the rail) was given second money, with Sgt. Byrne (on the outside) placed third. Brannon, the fourth horse, is between Night Play and Crossbow II. This picture was taken a yard and a half from the finish, Sgt. Byrne had closed in at the end. Story and chart on page 18.

Cross Bow II Wins Pimlico Feature After 4-Way Photo Finish

$7.30 Mutuel Is Returned By Winner

Night Play Is Second; Infantry Triumphs Before 10,000.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., Nov. 2. The chartmakers called "three noses" and waited for the camera to place the horses in the finish of the Monumental Purse which featured the opening day program at this ancient race track. After the judges had consulted the negative, they flashed the numbers in this order: Cross Bow II, Night Play, Sergt. Byrne and Brannon. The only other member of the field, Dusky Prince, was far back.

It was by far the most thrilling finish of a race in Maryland this fall. The word "nose" is used only because the vernacular of the turf contains no smaller margin. The four horses arrived at the finish line by a variety of routes, but there they were, struggling and battling to the din of the crowd of 10,000.

Cross Bow II was second choice in the betting and paid a $7.30 mutuel. Sergt. Byrne, named for a Jamaica policeman and fresh from his New York triumphs, was played as if the race had already been run. Cross Bow II carried 120 pounds, 2 less than the favorite.

Sergt. Byrne was first to break, but Jockey Horn attempted to rate him off the pace and Brannon forged to the front to open a gap approaching the far turn. Cross Bow II close up, dislodged Brannon on the swing for the stretch, but Night Play was soon to be a threat as he came through on the rail and the three charged on to the wire. First one and then the other held the lead, but Sergt. Byrne was not out of it. He rushed up to make it four noses on the wire.

While the crowd was waiting for the official result much money was bet on the possible winner, some even contending that Sergt. Byrne had taken the decision.

The program saw the Millsdale Stable's Infantry match the 1 1-16 miles track record with a 1:44 performance to even the time hung up by Watch Him. Infantry, one of the most improved horses in training, defeated, among others, Bootless, the crack Bradley gelding. Our Reigh was third. Infantry paid a $4.40 mutuel.

Pays $7 Mutuel.

The Mrs. Denemark entry ran one, two far out in front of the favored No Sir in the seventh race over the 6-furlong course. The race was between the Chicago-owned pair and Prairie Dog was judged the winner over Uneasy. The combination paid a $7 mutuel.

The Shandon Farm accounted for the first race of the meeting when Gold Flag made every post a winning one in a 6-furlong dash for juvenile maidens. Ridden by Harry Richards, Gold Flag gave his backers no anxious moments and finished four lengths in advance of Noble Boy, one that paid $70.10 to place. Scrooge, with the winner, a "good thing" in the betting, was third in the field of 12. The winner paid an $8 mutuel.

Wilfrid G., at a $42.10 mutuel, surprised the talent in the day's steeplechase event, winning by a length and a half from Harem Honey, which took the place money in a photo finish with Greatorex. Wilford G. was capably handled by Jockey Clements, being held under restraint for a mile and then withstanding a long drive. Greatorex might have won but for attempting to run out at the final fence, which cost him several lengths.

Rowes Crump Victor.

Rowes Crump finally ran into the winning circle in the third race at a $9 mutuel. The son of Ed Crump, ridden by Jockey Westrope, earned the decision via the photo. Light and Teddy Haslam arrived at the line along with the ultimate winner which came from far back. The test was at a mile and 70 yards.

Calumet Dick, running in the colors of E. K. Bryson, upset the heavily played Jesting in the fifth race to take a neck decision after a fine ride by Jockey R. Root: Buck Langhorne was a well beaten third in the group of seven. Calumet Dick saved ground all the way and paid $10.90. Jesting was off poorly and was carried wide at the first turn.

Albuquerque was winner of the eighth and last number with Wandrel second and Apertif third. The winner paid a $6.30 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD FLAG, $8.00, $5.60, $3.50; NOBLE BOY, $70.10, $18.10; SCROOGE, $3.20.

GOLD FLAG, off first, was steadied along to the stretch, drew out when placed to strong hand riding and was being taken in hand at the end. NOBLE BOY followed closest to the pace from the beginning, saved ground and closed willingly. SCROOGE, off poorly, had something taken out of him reaching contention and went evenly thereafter. DUNNAMANY worked his way up on the inside and closed gamely. SEVENTH INNING had no mishaps. POST MERIDIAN, away slowly, was hard used while being sent up on the outside and faltered slightly in the late stages. COUNT ARTHUR, off in the first flight, tired gradually. The others were not factors.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Fairhill Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:56½. Off at 1:57½. Winner, K. R. HEDRIC	(Reid)	142	7	5	4¹²	6¹	7	7	7	44.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILFRID G., $42.10, $11.90, $4.80; HAREM HONEY, $5.40, $3.90; GREATOREX, $4.20.

WILFRID G., under restraint while being kept on the outside, went to the leaders with good speed, alternately set and pressed the pace. GREATOREX, always forwardly placed, took the lead from HAREM HONEY and attempted to run out at the thirteenth fence, which lost him the race. HAREM HONEY, steadied over the jumps while in the thick of contention, was in light quarters between WILFRED G. and GREATOREX approaching the final fence and closed gamely. HURRY HARRY saved ground throughout, but failed to rally when placed to a drive. SUNNY LASSIE was rushed to the front at once and began tiring after a mile.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Arlington. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:26. Off at 2:28½. Winner, T. Rodrock's ch. g. (3), by Crusader—Rowesgold. Trained by T. Rodrock. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:14, 1:40 2-5, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROWES CRUMP, $9.00, $4.80, $2.70; LIGHT, $5.70, $2.90; TEDDY HASLAM, $2.70.

ROWES CRUMP, allowed to settle into best stride and steered out of trouble at the first turn, gained steadily when placed to a drive and closed between LIGHT and TEDDY HASLAM to barely get up. TEDDY HASLAM went to the top at once, was challenged repeatedly by AROUSED and finished in close quarters along the rail. LIGHT, bumped at the first turn, was in the thick of contention throughout and came to the outside to close willingly. DROLL STORY closed gamely. BRIGHT EMERALD suffered interference at the first turn. THIRTEEN STARS closed some ground. AROUSED bumped horses at the first turn, was rushed up abreast of TEDDY HASLAM and tired. SHANSI showed good speed to reach contention and stopped badly.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $38.90.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Happy Time. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:03. Winner, Milladale Stable's b. g. (3), by Chance Shot—La Bazonette. Trained by A. Pelletieri. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:12, 1:37 1-5, 1:44. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFANTRY, $4.40, $2.50, $2.20; BOOTLESS, $2.60, $2.20; OUR REIGH, $2.60.

INFANTRY, off alertly, assumed a good lead entering the backstretch, was steadied along in front of BOOTLESS, was placed to a drive when BOOTLESS challenged midway of the stretch, drew out and was intermittently punished while opening a gap. BOOTLESS was restrained while running with INFANTRY, was shaken up in the stretch, but could not match the winner. OUR REIGH stumbled just after the break, improved his position in the final quarter after saving ground entering the stretch. GENIE PALATINE had good speed for a half. MR. BUN was a distant trailer throughout.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Ratcliffe. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:29½. Off at 3:30½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's dk. b. g. (4), by Gallant Fox—Martha Snow. Trained by H. Bacon. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:12 4-5, 1:37 4-5, 1:42 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALUMET DICK, $10.90, $4.10, $2.80; JESTING, $2.80, $2.40; BUCK LANGHORNE, $3.30.

CALUMET DICK, off in the first flight, saved ground throughout, pressed the early pace of BIJURO, was taken under restraint when JESTING assumed command approaching the far turn, moved up again when put to a drive and held slight advantage in the stretch. The stretch runner energetic handling. JESTING was away poorly, was forced wide at the first turn by SCATTER BRAIN, rushed up on the outside to get to the front and fought it out willingly. BUCK LANGHORNE was unprepared for the break, swerved out, was shuffled back at the first turn and was held safe. TREFORD went evenly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Monumental. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 4:02. Winner, Calumet Farm's ch. g. (3), by Crusader—Slow and Easy. Trained by F. J. Kears. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROSSBOW II, $7.30, $4.20, $2.30; NIGHT PLAY, $8.20, $2.90; SERGT. BYRNE, $2.10.

CROSSBOW II came up on the outside to take command from BRANNON and barely lasted under strong handling. NIGHT PLAY saved ground throughout, came through on the rail entering the stretch and fought it out willingly. SERGT. BYRNE, taken back after breaking on top, was forced to the outside for racing room in the late stretch and closed with a rush. BRANNON opened a lead going to the first turn and came gamely in the final test. DUSKY PRINCE was always outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Pace. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:34. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRAIRIE DOG, $7.00, $4.60, $2.70; UNEASY, $4.60, $2.70; NO SIR, $2.70.

PRAIRIE DOG, sent to the front under hustling tactics, was taken in hand approaching the stretch and held sway under mild urging to the end. UNEASY, closest to the pace from the beginning, gained gradually on the winner and was not being extended. NO SIR broke poorly, was rushed into contention, but failed in the stretch. DUE saved ground entering the stretch, but could not threaten. MASKED GENERAL went evenly. The others were outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:03. Winner, L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBUQUERQUE, $6.30, $3.90, $3.20; WANDREL, $5.60, $4.10; APERITIF, $6.30.

ALBUQUERQUE, closest to the pace of APERITIF from the beginning, withstood a long drive to be up in the closing strides. WANDREL went to the leaders with a rush along the backstretch after being away slowly and came with a belated rush on the outside after being steadied to the stretch. APERITIF went to the front going to the backstretch, was hard ridden throughout, but was tiring gradually at the finish. POMPOSITY closed resolutely. ROSS came through on the inside at the final bend, but hung. SILVERY CLOUD stopped after holding a forward position.

80 Teams to Participate In Community League

Seven gymnasiums of the Community Center Department will buzz with activity this week with the opening of the 1936-37 basketball season.

Eighty teams will function in various leagues under the direction of Harry ("Pete") English, former Wilson Teachers athlete.

There will be a major league composed of eight of the outstanding senior teams in and around the District. Among those who will play in the major loop are Olmsted Grill, W. P. A. Bureau of Investigation, Delaware & Hudson, Mount Vernon, District of Columbia Fire Department and Rockville.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah, Fla., Nov. 2.—The Australian starting gate, believed by Joseph E. Widener to be a step forward in the progress of American thoroughbred racing, has been installed at Hialeah Park.

Widener, Philadelphia sportsman and president of the Miami Jockey Club, tested the gate yesterday and pronounced it ready for the January opening of the Hialeah Park race meeting.

The new barrier, already in widespread use at tracks in Australia, England, France and other countries, is to be used this season at Hialeah only for 2-year-olds which have not been trained from the old gate.

The Australian gate, installed here by its inventor, Reuben G. Gray, of Sydney, permits the horses to start from a standstill or from a walk. Six rope strands are stretched across the track at a height of about 4½ feet. The starter pulls a lever which releases a spring device that jerks the barrier up and ahead at a 45-degree angle to a height of about 12 feet.

Widener believes the gate will make for a faster and fairer break and eliminate the danger of injuring horses at the start.

"I'm just doing my part," Widener said, "to preserve the sportsmanship of racing. Now it's up to the jockeys and owners of other tracks to fall in line and help me make this a success."

Widener plans to introduce the Australian gate at Belmont Park next year, also with only 2-year-olds starting from it, and he hopes that by next year it may be used for horses of all ages.

Central Eleven Favored in 35th Annual Clash With Tech Today

By John R. Vosburgh.

Vaguely aware that an election was to take place today, students of Tech and Central High prepared yesterday for an event of far more immediate importance—the thirty-fifth annual Tech-Central football game this afternoon.

Thousands of students, alumni and followers of the two schools were ready to flock to Central Stadium to see the old rivals renew their traditional series. Central needs one victory to draw even with Tech which has won 15 games to the Mount Pleasanters' 14. Five games were ties.

Victorious in four of its five games this season, Central rates a good choice to continue its parade to its second straight interhigh championship under Coach Hardy Pearce, the former George Washington tackle. Tech, winner of three games in five starts, enters the game in a more or less mysterious status.

Techmen Outplayed.

Flashing occasional strength intermixed with low-grade football, the Maroon has succeeded in confusing observers, faithful followers and even Coach Elmer P. (Hap) Hardell. Its 7-0 victory over Western last week kept it well in the race for the interhigh title but was far from convincing. Western outplayed the Techmen for most of the four quarters but the Maroon brought out one short-lived brand of good football to score the necessary touchdown.

It is fairly well agreed that Tech's chances of pulling an upset rest on its aerial game. The Central line, with its big tackles, Hugh Cramer, John Swank and reserve Bill Mandes, all tipping the scales at 200 pounds, will outweigh the Tech forwards 12 pounds per man. The Central backfield will average some seven pounds heavier per man.

Tech's chances of finding the great Central line for gains with running plays are as dim as Spearfish Teachers getting to the Rose Bowl, unless Coach Hardell has kept a store of bewildering reverses, laterals under cover all season. Deception is Tech's sole chance on the ground and only to a limited extent, for the Central line is too well coached to fall for much sleight-of-hand stuff.

Improves Defense.

Thus, the great kicking of Tech's Jack Belote and the passing of Belote and Stan Wells loom as the Maroon's chief reliance and Central has improved its pass defense with this threat in mind. On the other hand, Bill Wooten, Billy Vermillion and Bill Ickes, of Central, will not be standing still and it will take a greatly improved Tech line to hold those boys in check.

It will take almost perfect passing, clicking like clockwork, for Tech to outscore a Central team which appears certain to score merely with its average running game.

C.C.N.Y. Scouts Failed to Spot Gallaudet Plays

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Chaff from the Football Writers Association weekly luncheon:

"Nagurski is the only back I've ever seen who runs his own interference," said Owen. "But the boys who have played against him this year say he's slowed down somewhat. Now he gains only 6 yards at a time instead of 10."

Benny Friedman, whose city college team plays Gallaudet College for Deaf and Dumb, said his scouts weren't able to spot any of the Gallaudet signals except one.

"We know when the ball is going to be snapped," he said. "The quarterback reaches forward and taps the center on the seat of his pants."

Cal Hubbard, the 230-pound American League umpire, sporting a mouse the size of an egg under his right eye received in his debut with the New York Giants against the Detroit Lions yesterday, said:

Dartmouth is Columbia's next opponent and someone asked Lou Little how his Lions planned to stop Dartmouth's deep reverses.

"By tackling the ball carrier," was Lou's terse and pointed reply.

Eyewitness accounts of the Northwestern-Minnesota game:

Grantland Rice—"Minnesota is the best team I have seen this season. The Gophers were the victims of the queerest series of breaks ever seen."

Alan Gould—"Over the stretch of a season you'd pick Minnesota to beat Northwestern four out of five times. But you don't pay off on that. Northwestern was the better team that day. Minnesota's lateral passing was very poor."

Goodman Wins Golf Crown In Mexico

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Nov. 2.—Blond Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, outdid Mexico's Percy Clifford in golfing magic today, to win the Mexican National Amateur title by a 10 and 9 margin in the 36-hole final at the Chapultepec Golf Club.

A ding-dong battle for the women's title, which was not decided until the last green, saw Mrs. Patty Newbold, of Wichita, Kans., runner-up last year, defeat 17-year-old Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., 1 up.

Goodman smashed the competitive course record of 67, held jointly by Clifford and John Dawson, of Chicago, when he completed his morning round in 66, five under par today. That gave him an 8-hole margin when he went to lunch and he easily ran out the match in nine holes of the afternoon round.

Clifford, the Mexico-born Briton, whose par and sub-par shooting on the early rounds had provided the tournament sensations, never was a match for the former Omaha caddy. He carded a weak 40 on the first nine against Goodman's 1-under-par 35, then found himself swamped on the in nine although he bettered par by two strokes with a 34. Goodman had a 31 coming home, picking up five birdies and four pars.

G-Men Annex 3 Games in Federal

The upward drive of the Bureau of Investigation team for the supremacy of the Federal League continued to function last night at the Arcadia drives, with the fast stepping G-Men aggregation taking the measure of Labor for three games. Charlie Bell's 379 set played a huge part for the victors. Groth's 154 game and 361 set was the loser's best effort.

A season record game of 165 by Louis Ruche and a 403 set gave the second place Veterans' Administration crew a three-game decision over Navy, and Lee Brown toppled the maples for a 160 game and 416 set, to give G. P. O. a clean sweep over Highway. War chalked up the top set of the season, shooting 660 in winning the odd game from Senate. Freddie Moore featured War's victory with a 150 game and 375 set. Civil Service was whitewashed by I. B. E. W.

The Rosslyn team, champions of the Ladies District League, suffered its first defeat of the season last night at Rosslyn, dropping the last game of a postponed match with Highway Engineers. The Highway girls out-rolled the champions, 1,537 to 1,532. Gladys Lynn, of Rosslyn, led the list of individual efforts with a 329 set.

The Loew's Theater girls, of Richmond, will make their first appearance in the South Atlantic Ladies League this week-end, being entertained at Rosslyn.

Bill Krauss was the shining light in the Kilowatt League last night at the Lucky Strike, shooting a 144 game and 388 set to give the District Engineers high game and set with 589 and 1,656, respectively. Paul Fellowers (Station Engineers) shot a 375 set.

A meeting of the Washington Women's Duckpin Association will be held on Friday night at 8:30 at the Lucky Strike alleys. Representatives of each league are requested to be present. Lena Miller, of the association, has stated informally that she expects to resign her position as secretary. No reason for her pending action was given.

"Imported" Mule, New Army Mascot, To Arrive Today

By the United Press.

When the S. S. Santa Barbara docks in New York today a United States Army truck will meet the ship prepared to take off and transport an Army mule to West Point.

The mule destined to become the new mascot for Uncle Sam's Cadets at the military Academy, was foaled in the interior of Ecuador and has been presented to the academy by Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ecuadarian Ambassador here.

Ambassador Alfaro is an old West Pointer himself and now has two sons enrolled there as cadets. He expects to see the new mascot in action at Philadelphia when the Army meets the Navy in their annual football classic on November 28.

The new mascot is 3 years old and is certified as being "free from any and all infectious and contagious diseases." Ambassador Alfaro is confident that the mule will pack a kick that will keep the Navy team well within its own territory during the Army-Navy game.

All Sports Banquet Scheduled Dec. 12

The All Sports banquet to be sponsored by the Touchdown Club, will be held December 12, instead of December 5, at the Willard, it was decided yesterday at the club's weekly luncheon.

A football autographed by the country's outstanding coaches will be given away that night.

Frank Dobson, University of Maryland coach, and John F. McGovern, Touchdown Club president, were the principal speakers yesterday.

"We must give football back to the college administrative leaders, and take it out of the hands of influential and overzealous coaches and alumni," the Maryland mentor declared, adding:

"We should work also toward a damper on this runaway publicity which has made the game pretty much of a matter of life and death to many of the players."

President McGovern, who saw the Minnesota-Northwestern game Saturday, gave a brief review of the contest. He is a former All-American quarterback from Minnesota.

Defense Stressed By Spiders' Coach

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Defensive measures occupied the entire attention of the University of Richmond Spiders today as they prepared for next Saturday's meeting with Maryland's Old Liners.

Most of the afternoon was spent by Coach Gleen Thistlethwaite in drillings his ends against end sweeps, but at the close of the workout the veteran mentor said he was far from satisfied. Alternating at one end was the injured A. B. Marchant and Buddy Lawless while Arthur Gore and Bill Morrison were taking turns at the other flank. All are sophomores.

Anacostia Eagles Win.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

En Route to Washington, Nov. 2.

When Ed Widseth, Minnesota tackle and co-captain took a punch at a Northwestern back last Saturday and incurred the penalty that was heard 'round the football world, he was introducing no new note in football. A good set of knuckles has often proved a handy weapon, specially if the referee isn't looking.

POVICH.

There was that famous right landed by a Princeton lineman on the nose of a Harvard guard, causing the two colleges to sever relations a decade ago. It must have been a right fair punch, cause when he left the game the impression of a Princeton's signet was still clearly visible on the Harvard man's nose.

That punch also provided Columnist Heywood Broun with one of his choicest cracks. An undergraduate at Harvard in the days of hardier Crimson teams, Broun had long been deploring in print the decline of Harvard in football.

"I feared they were getting soft up there at Cambridge," wrote Broun after the signet ring incident, "but this is the first proof that Harvard men are made of wax."

The sneak punch is the most popular among the college lads, although in justice to Widseth, he made no attempt to get away with anything surreptitious at Evanston last Saturday. The pair of fists he flung at Don Geyer, Northwestern back, were thrown in the open, after the referee's whistle had blown. But on the lots, the boys are not so particular.

Harry Costello, Washington newspaperman, former Georgetown star and soldier of fortune, tells this story of the game between two teams of coal miners at Connellsville, Pa. The miners, literally living for the game for months, demanded the best referee obtainable and sought out Pop Warner to help them engage the best.

Warner unhesitatingly recommended the late Tiny Maxwell and Maxwell agreed to officiate, hiring Costello as the umpire. The morning of the game, a committee called upon Maxwell at his hotel, explained that this was not a college game, that the boys might get a bit rough and that they didn't want too many penalties marring the proceedings. A lot of dough had been bet on the game, they made plain.

Maxwell listened patiently and reassured his callers. "All right, boys, if that's the way you want it, I understand," he told 'em. "It's all right with us."

Thus anticipating a rough battle, Maxwell, Costello and the third official started for the field, but they were not prepared for the scene that confronted them there. A thousand miners, marching into the park, bore huge signs: "We'll kill the captain of Tipple No. 10." "We'll murder the team from Tipple No. 10." "Tipple No. 10 is yellow."

Done with their marching, Tipple No. 12 supporters took their seats. Then onto the field paraded the rooters from Tipple No. 10, brandishing their own subtle boasts. "We'll break the legs of Tipple No. 12," read one sign. Another huge banner, an attempt at verse, warned: "Tipple No. 10 will murder them." A third sign read, "Tipple No. 12 are yellow dogs."

Thus, with misgivings, but prepared to let the teams mix it a bit if they liked, Maxwell lined them up for the kick-off. Tipple No. 12 was to kick off to Tipple No. 10. Maxwell blew his whistle, the Tipple No. 10 captain sent a mighty foot into the ball.

Down the field sailed the ball and Maxwell, Costello and the head linesman were on the alert. But not a tackle was made, not a block was attempted, no man from Tipple No. 10 even attempted to catch the ball, which was lying unmolested near the 10-yard line.

Because, at the sound of Maxwell's starting whistle, each miner had picked out his man and rushed toward him. At midfield, 11 separate fights developed. They had a few grudges to settle and couldn't be bothered about the football. For ten minutes they paired off in fist fights.

Finally, Maxwell restored order. "Listen, you guys," he boomed. "Do you want to play under the rules of football or under the rules of the Marquis of Queensberry. It doesn't matter to me. I know 'em both. But let's you and I get together."

Landon Wins, 6-0; Shows Power in Election-Eve Game

On The Post scoresheet, Everett had won the first two rounds with comparative ease and was far ahead on points in the third—until that one decisive wallop landed in that particularly vulnerable spot.

Edwards Loses Verdict.

Billy Edwards, making his first fight in more than three years, and Shorty Ahearn, recent conqueror of Killer Lamar, battled six rounds of as grueling a battle as one would care to see in semifinal. These willing colored clouters battered each other down to a slow walk before the finish, but they were still doing their best to land knockout punches at the final bell, as feeble as they were by then. Ahearn was awarded decision. The decision did not please the crowd, which probably means a rematch.

Charles (Hobo) Williams, up-and-coming young roaming middleweight who now makes his home in Alexandria, continued his streak of victories by stopping one Jackie Fitzsimmons, of Trenton, N. J., in the third round. Williams had Fitz on the deck in every round and finally applied the sleep-producer to end the contest after 1 minute and 50 seconds of the third.

John L. Pavlovich, a sparmate of Olin's scored a second-round knockout over George Terry, also of Trenton, in another preliminary scheduled for six rounds.

Dodgers Due to Name New Pilot This Week

Brooklyn, Nov. 2 (AP).—Successor to Casey Stengel as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers "will probably be named the middle or end of this week," John Gorman, business manager of the club, said today.

Unconfirmed rumors indicate that Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Louisville Club last season, will get the job.

G. W. Eleven Happy on Return

Special Dispatch to The Post.

En Route to Washington, Nov. 2. Attracting attention at every whistle-stop as they waved newly acquired 10-gallon hats and emitted wild Comanche yells, George Washington's Colonials were on their last leg of their journey home tonight.

Beaten by one touchdown last Saturday at Houston, by Rice, the team that licked 'em 41-0 last season, the Colonials are now determined to finish their schedule with only that single blot on their 1936 record.

Head Coach Jim Pixlee, in a brief talk to the team today, warned the players that he anticipated a hard game with Davis-Elkins at Griffith Stadium on Saturday and ordered a practice tomorrow afternoon in Washington.

Following the Davis-Elkins game, George Washington faces two more opponents—Catawba on the following Saturday and West Virginia on Thanksgiving Day at Griffith Stadium.

The Colonials will arrive in Washington tomorrow morning at 7:50 o'clock, with their full strength available for the remaining games on the schedule. Ted Cottingham, guard, and Alan Holt, end, the chief casualties of the Rice game, will be available for the Davis-Elkins battle.

G. W. Rooters to Greet Football Players

Two tremendous forces of the George Washington University's extra-cullicular activities department, the Bousers and the 70-piece band, under the personal supervision of Maestro Leon Brusiloff, plan to greet the returning Colonial squad and coaches at 7:50 this morning at the Washington Terminal.

The team, returning from Houston, Tex., where they met defeat for the first time this season, haven't the faintest idea of the noise-makers' plans. Many sleeping Colonials will probably be blasted out of their Pullmans by their awaiting colleagues.

Middleburg Hunt Jump Four Foxes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 2.—Three reds and a gray fox were jumped by the Middleburg Hunt this morning and gave the riders a two-hour chase. They met at Dr. Tom Neill's farm at 9 o'clock. A fox was started on Steptoe Mountains 30 minutes after the hounds were cast. While the red was running, a gray was jumped and the hounds denned the latter on the Wildman farm. They picked up the trail of the red again and after a 40-minute run, denned this fox on the same place.

The field was led by D. C. Sands and Miss Charlotte H. Noland, joint masters. Others riding were Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hulbert, Walter H. West, Miss Rosemary Ward, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Miss Laura Sprague, Roger Fred and the huntsman, Robert Maddox.

Hollidge and Shaner, Eastern High Court Stars, Enter G. W.

Coming as a distinct surprise, it was learned yesterday that Chick Hollidge and Buddy Shaner, stars for three years on Eastern High's great basketball team, have entered George Washington University and will work out with the Colonial freshmen five next week.

SHANER

HOLLIDGE

Hollidge, lanky all-high forward for three years and shrewd floor leader of the great Eastern five of the last three years, had been expected at Georgetown University. Lavelle Dean, another star member of Coach Charlie Guyon's champs, entered the Hilltop school in the fall.

Hollidge and Shaner, brilliant passing combination for years, decided, however, to enter G. W., where both are enrolled in the business administration school. Considered one of the wisest courtmen ever turned out by a local high school, Hollidge became the leading scorer in the interhigh series last season, scoring 81 points to Dean's 77.

More than 85 per cent of Hollidge's scores were under-the-basket shots. The fast-passing, fast-breaking, fast-shooting talent of both Shaner and Hollidge fits in perfectly with the G. W. style of play. Freshman Coach Otts Zahn, former Eastern star, will call out the G. W. yearling squad next week. Shaner, incidentally, averaged 5 points a game in the interhigh series while handicapped by a bad ankle.

Meanwhile, Bill Buckholtz and Reds Scheible, the latter an all-high guard, have not entered school. Both were regulars on the great Eastern team.

Hollidge and Shaner were both subjected to numerous "offers" from various schools—Hollidge from Georgetown, Maryland, Syracuse, Colgate and Villanova and Shaner from Maryland, Syracuse, Colgate and Villanova.

Bankers See Rise Continued All Next Year

Weaknesses in Situation Have Been Ignored, Survey Says.

New York, Nov. 2.—Business has shown steady improvement for successive quarters and every sign at present points to a full year of progress, says Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association, today.

"This is the first time since the beginning of the depression that there have been nine months of constantly increasing business activity," its review say. "Security prices have reached a level not attained since before the devaluation of the pound in 1931. Commodity prices average higher than at any time since 1930 and industrial production is higher than at any time in the last six years.

"Business is not unmindful of the weaknesses in the present situation, of the fact that much of our business activity is a result of Government deficit spending and mounting public debt. There is the prospect of raising taxes and there is a persistent disposition on the part of public authorities to regulate and restrict business men. Coupled with this is an active hostility in many quarters to big and little business and there are other social and political factors which are not conducive to the free play of individual initiative.

Obstacles to Be Overcome.

"These unfavorable conditions have not been discounted so much as they have been ignored and defied. They are easily recognizable as obstacles which must be overcome. The determination of business to go ahead in spite of these disturbing elements makes the advance seem irresistible.

"The average responsible business man has come to realize, whatever the outcome of the election, that the time has arrived when he must justify his right to profit. Any canvass of the situation in all parts of the country will show this to be true. Private business appears fully cognizant of the fact that if the capitalistic system is to prove its fundamental superiority and business its right to self-government, now is the time to do it.

"A comparison between the thriving condition of business in the United States and the disturbing developments abroad furnishes an interesting contrast and constitutes a fair measure of the forward surge now taking place in the commerce and industry of this country."

International Nickel Lifts Common Dividend

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Directors of International Nickel Co., of Canada, Ltd., today boosted the dividend on the common stock to 40 cents a share. September 30 a dividend of 35 cents was paid while in June the payment was 30 cents and in March 25 cents. The latest payment will be made December 31 to stock of record December 1.

The company's principal properties are in the Sudbury district of Ontario where it mines the bulk of the world's nickel supply. It is also a large producer of copper.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended October 24 as approximately 9,600,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1935, 8,305,000 tons; 1934, 7,209,000 tons.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular in Less Active Trading; Utilities Sell Off; Wheat Lower.

New York, Nov. 2.—Financial markets closed with Wall Street in an uncertain frame of mind over the election, and prices were irregular with a tendency toward heaviness in several groups. Sales were smaller at around 1,500,000 shares. Bonds were easier, with most of the Government issues down a little. December wheat closed a quarter of a cent lower at 114 cents a bushel.

Except insofar as strength in the metal shares and softness in the public utility group may be construed as giving some indication of Wall Street's hopes and fears on the election (inflation the one case and straffing in the other) the market wound up the first stretch of the New Deal without much indication of what is expected, unless it be more of what recently has been experienced. Higher prices for foreign copper and talk of another boost in the domestic price gave a better tone to the copper market, but the silver shares also went to new high prices on this movement.

The best metal performer was Andes, mostly owned by Anaconda, and consequently enjoying a thin market. It added half a dozen points to last week's gain of nine points. Smelters, Cerro and Anaconda were popular, Calumet & Hecla was inactive. Public utilities gave up from a fraction to more than four points, the larger losses being taken among preferred issues. North American settled back two points, although it has been specifically promised immunity from the New Deal attack on holding companies. Consolidated Edison lost more than a point. The utility group was the most active by a big margin.

Prices Follow Business.

Motor shares were firm but moved within a narrow range. Auburn lost a point. Steels were depressed by fractions, as were most of the rails. Chemicals moved irresolutely. Du Pont recovered an early loss of four points. Air Reduction hardened. Oil shares failed to do much, but Standard Oil started up and reached its highest price for the present movement. Farm implement and mail order shares dipped one to four points. Case had to contend with unfavorable strike news.

Industrial stocks at the close of October had reached the highest levels since 1930, although prices for the most part still were far below the heights of 1929. Judged by most of the indices of business activity, present stock prices have not wandered far from the line of business. Such running ahead as may be found is set down to the extra dividend flood brought on by the next tax and the well known fact that profits for business (earnings per share) usually rise more quickly than the operating rate for any industry in a time of general improvement.

Nobody expected that prices would move far up or down with the election just around the corner. Their relative stability and the comparative slackness of dealings suggested no doubt that hope is fairly strong in a good market for a while, no matter which side wins. Not much attention was paid to industrial news, or to foreign developments either, since the financial district was preoccupied with trying to guess on the election result. The time honored process used was, naturally, to ask one another.

Labor Troubles.

Spreading of the seamen's strike to the Eastern seaboard was an unfavorable business development and undoubtedly if labor trouble delays shipping long a considerable setback may be given to the business recovery. Markets, nevertheless, are usually unwilling to retreat far on strike news. Either they anticipate it, or they acknowledge the effects some time afterward. On this particular occasion, furthermore, it is supposed that the election outcome might change the picture quickly enough to prevent any widespread labor disorder.

Actually business in the heavy industries is rising a little. This week's operating rate of the steel industry, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, will climb to 74.7 per cent of capacity against 74.3 per cent last week and 50.9 per cent a year ago. Retail trade will surely expand from now until the year end and approach of the national motor show means increasing activity in the automotive industry. On the intangible side, the threat of Government hazing of business was repeated with emphasis in the latest campaign broadside fired by the New Deal.

Money Changing.

The President's invitation to those who did not agree with him on certain points to emigrate, was applied by some investors to their money, judging by the selling of certain kinds of domestic bonds and the strength of some foreign ones. Australian bonds seemed to be preferred, probably because the Antipodes are about the furthest away.

Profits.

Compilation of profits reported for third quarter by 245 leading companies shows, according to the National City Bank, a gain of 58.7 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. That figure corresponds closely with the Sun's tables previously published, and shows a fairly large drop from second quarter, probably mostly seasonal, and also a decline in the percentage of gain over the same period of last year as compared with the percentage rise in profits reported for second quarter. It is only natural that the percentage of rise in profits should diminish, now that the first stage of business recovery has been passed and the period of rising wage and raw material costs is beginning to take form, to say nothing of higher taxes. Industry has not yet run into enough demand to enable it to pass on to consumers its rising costs. Except for foodstuffs, the prices of finished articles are not much greater than a year ago. In spite of the good recovery, business in general is much less profitable than it was before the depression.

N. Y. Brokers Offer All-Night Service

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Twenty-four hour service, a new wrinkle in Wall Street, was offered today for election day. The firm issued a statement saying one of its offices in the mid-town section of New York "will remain open throughout election night for the transaction of orders to our offices in London, England."

Tire Companies Increase Prices

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 2 (AP).—Rubber manufacturers announced today adjustments of retail tire prices, including small increases and giving dealers increased margins of profits.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. said that increases averaged about 4 per cent, while Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. said that first and second line tires would be increased about 4 per cent while the third and fourth line product wold drop slightly in price. B. F. Goodrich Co. described the changes as "adjustments," they are effective today. The Firestone announcement said that "on all lines, the dealers' margin of profit is increased.

Acacia Volume Up 7.4 Million In Nine Months

Gain for Corresponding Period Last Year Was $545,000.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A strong advance in the national economic curve is reflected in business results achieved by Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. during the first nine months of this year. This is shown in a report submitted to the company's board of directors by President William Montgomery.

WILLIAM MONTGOMERY.

Every phase of Acacia's activity during the first nine months of the current year has recorded a truly remarkable advance over the corresponding period of 1935, and every index available to the company indicates a marked improvement in fundamental economic conditions," President Montgomery stated.

"Even a brief statistical resume of the first nine months of this year, on a comparative basis, will serve to illustrate the current situation," he added. "For example, during the first nine months of 1935, the net increase in the volume of business was $545,000. The net increase for the corresponding period of this year is $7,426,000. At the same time the net business gained 22½ per cent.

Conservation Rate.

During this period Acacia has registered a further betterment of 25 per cent in its conservation rate. Alongside of this basically important improvement should be ranged the fact that the volume of policy loans now is back to the normal, pre-depression rate. During the first nine months of 1936 Acacia experienced a further reduction of 20 per cent in the number of loans to policyholders. The significance of the conservation and policy loan trends, as an index of steadily strengthening general economic conditions, is clear.

"The assets of Acacia also have gained very appreciably during this period, advancing a total of more than $4,250,000 in the nine months' span. Total assets now stand at more than $84,600,000. Insurance in force has gained to an aggregate of approximately $360,000,000. Net income of the company has increased more than 20 per cent.

"It is interesting to note that of the $4,500,000 paid out during this period to living policyholders and beneficiaries, more than $2,400,000—over half—was paid to living policyholders in matured endowments, dividends, etc.

"That Acacia's action in making its service available to women has met with substantial approval is indicated by the results thus far achieved. From August 10—the ef-

Several produce, dairy and livestock markets will be open. All European and Canadian financial exchanges will be open as usual.

Am. Air Line Travel Gains 31.5 Per Cent

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—President C. R. Smith, of American Airlines, Inc., announced today the system carried 31.5 per cent more revenue passengers during the first nine months this year than in the same period of 1935.

The total this year was 175,549 passengers; last year, 133,495. Total for 12 months last year was 176,005, monthly average for nine months this year was 19,505 passengers; last year, 14,667.

Cotton Belt Prospers From British Boom

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, England.—Prosperity in England has spread to the cotton belt of the United States. Imports of American cotton are running at a higher rate, and the mills of Manchester and other textile centers are paying more for the American staple. In addition, American growths have nosed out other cotton in popularity.

As an example for the year ended August 31, 1936, (the cotton year) the United Kingdom showed a decrease in imports of cotton other than the American growth. American cotton, however, increased 359,000 bales during the year.

For the period August 1 to October 9, 1936, imports of American cotton totaled 153,00 bales compared with 130,000 during the same period the year before.

All of that cotton sold at higher prices, too. The average at the end of the weeks between August 1 and October 9, 1936, was 6.70 pence a pound at the lowest and 7.02 at the highest compared with a range of 6.11@6.68 for the same weeks of 1935.

Copper Continues To Another High

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Price of copper for export to European ports soared again today and touched 10.48 cents a pound, the highest since January, 1931, when sales were made at 10.55 cents.

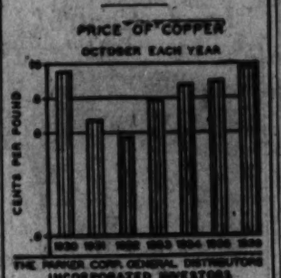
Heavy armament demand, depleted visible stocks and general industrial expansion have been credited for the mounting price which has climbed from 9.85 cents in a little more than a month. On Saturday transactions were made at from 10.35 to 10.375 cents.

Retail Advertising Gains 10.1 Per Cent

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Magazine Advertising Age reported today that the 20,294,693 lines of retail advertising placed by merchants of 67 major cities in the week ended October 24 was a gain of 10.1 per cent over the corresponding week last year.

For the year to date, the total of 733,667,425 lines was an increase of 6.1 per cent over the same period in 1935.

War Preparations Lift Copper Price



Boston, Mass., Nov. 2.—Foreign war preparations are a boon to copper and that is one reason for the heavy demand and steadily rising price of the red metal. The price of domestic copper has been steadily going up and ended the month at 10 cents per pound—the highest for over five years.

Curb Prices Dip In Liquidation

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Sellers gained the upper hand in quiet curb market dealings today, resulting in modest losses by a majority of leading issues.

Declines of minor fractions to more than a point were registered by Newmont Mining at 99, Niagara Hudson Power, 15½; Sherwin-Williams, 133; Wayne Pump, 30¾; Aluminum Co., 127½; American Light & Traction, 23, and Great Atlantic & Pacific, 120. Electric Bond & Share, unusually active, dropped from 23¾ to 22½, and closed at 22½ for a net loss of 1¾ points.

Issues breasting the tide and ending with plus signs included Ohio Brass "B," Pan-American Airways, Sunshine Mining and Bunker Hill & Sullivan. Transfers aggregated 486,000 shares compared with 555,000 on Friday.

Wheat Prices Sag Awaiting Crop Forecast

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Reluctance that numerous traders showed in regard to entering upon new commitments until after tomorrow's election did much today to make wheat prices sag.

A disposition to await November domestic private crop estimates due Wednesday was also evident on the part of some speculative interests. One unofficial forecast issued today said returns pointed to but 11 per cent larger winter wheat acreage in the United States than last year.

means altogether DOWN

Shoes are so important to a man's appearance that the value of Johnston and Murphy shoes cannot be over-emphasized.

Here is a shoe, admittedly as smart as a shoe can be, that has in its inner quality the strength of material and construction to stand up through long wear and, to the last, to say to any beholder, "This is a good shoe."

Record of Reforms May Free Fugitive

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Hopes of continuing the freedom from a Michigan prison gained by Howard Fulger, 56-year-old apartment engineer, 17 years ago in a tunnel escape rested tonight largely on his record as "Howard Law."

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan expressed a lenient attitude toward Fulger, who was seized here Saturday. Fulger readily admitted his true identity, but refused to waive extradition to Michigan.

Gov. Fitzgerald said:

"If this man has made the splendid record in private life that newspaper stories indicate, I see no purpose in returning him from Chicago to Michigan.

"The purpose of a prison sentence is to reform a man and rehabilitate him for a return to society. If that purpose has been served, it might seem unnecessarily harsh to send him back to prison."

Funeral Held Here For Mrs. Hurlbut

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma Florence Hurlbut, 79, widow of William J. Hurlbut, former industrial agent for the Southern Railway, were held last night at Hines' undertaking establishment, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will take place in Buena Vista, Va., at 2 p. m. today.

Mrs. Hurlbut died Sunday at her home, 437 Ingraham street northwest. A native of Brownsburg, Va., she had lived in Washington for 25 years. Her husband died in 1913.

Surviving are two sons, William D. Hurlbut, of Virginia Highlands, Va., and Clarence J. Hurlbut, of Washington; three sisters, Mrs. Mary T. Brooks, Mrs. Lee Rutherford and Mrs. A. B. Beckwith, all of Salem, Va., and a brother, John Deaver, of Roanoke, Va. She also leaves three grandchildren.

3 Arabs Condemned.

Jerusalem, Nov. 2 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—A Jerusalem court today sentenced three Arabs to death, one of them for the slaying of a British army officer and two for the death of a British policeman during recent disorders.

Tuesday, November 17, 1936, and there publicly opened and read immediately thereafter, for the construction of the following project: A school building, located in Arlington County, Virginia, according to plans and specifications on file at the office of Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, Arlington, Virginia. Said plans, specifications and forms of proposals may be obtained at the office of R. B. Long, State Office Building, Richmond, Virginia. Upon deposit at said office of $100, which will be refunded to each unsuccessful bidder, upon return of same in good condition within ten days after the opening of bids. All proposals shall be on the standard form furnished by the architect and sealed and plainly marked. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check or acceptable bidders bond in the amount of 5 per cent of the total bid, made payable to Arlington School Board. Said check or bonds will be returned to the unsuccessful bidders within 30 days after opening of bids. The successful bidder shall furnish a bond in the amount of the contract price, issued by a responsible surety approved by architect and by the acting State director (Virginia) for P. W. A. Should the successful bidder fail to furnish said bonds and execute the contract within 20 days after notice of acceptance of his proposal, the 5 per cent bid check or bidders bond will be forfeited to the Arlington School Board as liquidated damages. Public liability and workman's compensation insurance, satisfactory tools to the said acting State director are required. After bid opening no bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of 30 days. This project, docket number 1119 D, is being financed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. All the rules and regulations established by the President and adopted by the administrator must be complied with. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rate set forth in the said specifications must be paid on this project. The school board reserves the right to reject any and all bids. (Signed) FLETCHER KEMP, Superintendent. 3,10

Lynchburg Teachers Ask Pay Restoration

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Teachers of Lynchburg schools today requested the school board to restore salaries to the 1931-1932 level. The teachers' petition reads, in part:

"In view of the great increase in living costs, we feel that this request is at this time necessary and not excessive."

Teachers' salaries in Lynchburg were cut 15 per cent after 1932. Last year 4½ per cent was restored and the teachers now ask an increase of 10¾ per cent.

British Sailors' Torture Is Laid To Japanese

Officers Charge Trio Were Forced to Admit Minor Crime.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Nov. 2.—Details of the alleged "fingernail torture" of three British sailors by Japanese police were disclosed today by officials of the British Asiatic naval headquarters here.

The officials said a fountain pen was jammed under the fingernails of one sailor and ink forced into the wounds to make him sign a "confession" sought by the Japanese.

The incident, which caused Vice Admiral Sir Charles Little, commanding the British Far East naval forces, to postpone a visit to Japan, occurred at Keelung, Formosa, October 7.

According to British naval officers, three seamen from British naval craft then stationad at Keelung were arrested by Japanese police for alleged nonpayment of taxicab fare.

Upon protesting, British officers here said, the three sailors were beaten to "persuade" them to sign a confesison of their refusal to pay the taxicab fare and also of resisting the police.

At the height of the assault, British officials said, Lieut. T. C. Packersford, of H. M. S. Bruce, arrived on the scene and requested that the sailors be released.

The Japanese threatened Packersford with imprisonment if he did not depart, officers here said, and after he left, the Japanese assertedly resumed the assaults on the three seamen and dislocated the jaw of one of them.

Two of the sailors eventually agreed to sign the desired confession, but the man with the broken jaw refused to sign and was thrown into jail and further tortured with a fountain pen until he signed the document.

British naval authorities announced they possessed indisputable proof that the sailors paid their taxi fare.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

Unblocking.

It is a serious error for a declarer first to disclose his exact resources and then to attempt to steal a crucial trick. Manifestly, success depends on reversing this process. In today's hand, the declarer played like a novice, and it was only because one of his opponents defended with the same lack of skill that the game contract was fulfilled.

South, dealer.

	♠ A Q 6 3 ♡ A ◇ Q 10 4 3 ♣ Q J 3 2
♠ J 9 5 4 ♡ K 10 6 3 2 ◇ 8 ♣ 8 5 4	North West East South	♠ 10 8 2 ♡ J 8 5 4 ◇ A J 9 5 ♣ 10 9
	♠ K 7 ♡ Q 9 7 ◇ K 7 6 2 ♣ A K 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

North should not have allowed the three notrump contract to stand. His hand was easily good enough to insure an 11-trick cantract in the minor suit, and he had not thoroughly explored slam possibilities by his two previous bids—not that he would have had to reach a slam (which could not have been made against the adverse lay of cards) but he might at least have inquired into the possibilities.

West opened the fourth highest heart which, of course, immediately removed dummy's Ace.

Declarer could count one heart trick, four club tricks, and three spade tricks, but it should have been obvious that a diamond trick would be necessary to clinch the contract. That being true, he should have led a diamond from the dummy at the very earliest opportunity, namely, the second trick. If the Ace lay in West's hand, he would be unable to put his partner on lead for a lead through South's guarded heart Queen, and if the Ace, unfortunately for declarer, were in East's hand, it would require great alertness on East's part for him to put it up at this early stage. In point of fact, it is doubtful if many of the leading players of the country holding the East hand would have put up the Ace of diamonds from the holding of A-J-9 at the second trick. But on this occasion, East was not called upon for any such brilliance.

Declarer, after winning the heart Ace, ran off four clubs and three top spades. On the second and third rounds of clubs, East discarded two low hearts, carefully preserving the hearts, carefully preserving the Jack for what he deemed to be a communication card to his partner's suit. He soon discovered his error. Dummy led a low diamond, and East, who had carefully counted the declarer's tricks as taken, jumped right up with the Ace, and led the heart Jack. But declarer refused to cover, and now West, who still held the K-10 and a small heart and a good spade, was unable to overtake except at the expense of establishing the declarer's Queen.

There was no necessity in this particular hand for East to reduce to one heart. He safely could have discarded another diamond, since, if declarer cashed even one diamond trick, the de fenders' cause was lost. But assuming it was necessary to hold no more than one heart, that one should be not a possible blocking card but a low one!

The crux of the matter is that unless the original leader holds a tenace over the declarer, all is lost anyway, but if he holds such tenace; it is fatal for the other defender to lead a card which will interfere with the mechanics of the tenace. Obviously, had East held on to a low heart instead of the Jack, the contract would have been defeated automatically.

$2,600 Mail Fraud Laid to 5 in Eye Specialist Racket

Norfolk, Va., Novfl 2 (AP).—Charged with using the mails to defraud an elderly woman of $2,600 in a fake eye specialist racke. in Southampton County last August, five men were indicted by the Federal grand jury here today.

The men are Frank Matchett, of Milwaukee, an attorney; G. Elliott Wilkinson, John M. Gray, Raymond B. Hal land Herbert H. Crangle. It is charged they received a check for $2,500 from Miss Roberta Ridley, and forwarded it to a bank in Milwaukee for clearance.

Matchett, Wilkinson and Gray already are under arrest. The latter is serving a term in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans. Hall and Crangle have not been apprehended.

The jury, in the first session of its October criminal term, took under consideration, 65 presentments against 93 persons.

31 Road Employes Get Pay Increases

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP).—Pay raises for 31 State roads commission classified employes—all in the plans and survey department—drew the approval of Dr. Homer E. Tabler, commission chairman, today. The increases, effective yesterday, range from $5 to $25 monthly, and total $4,740 annually.

The revisions were in accord with the commission's policy of restoring salaries to as near 1933 figures as possible in conformance with a standardization of salaries begun October 1. On that date, 644 employes received raises, on the basis of a special system of efficiency rating.

Last of 33 Removed From Ship on Rock

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—A surfboat today took off the last of the 33 members of the crew from the stricken American freighter, Bessemer City, of New York.

"Visibility was wretched," said Capt. Herman, "and we didn't even get a peep at the shore lights. We were on the rocks before we knew what had happened."

Seaman Petitions Reich for Pardon

Berlin, Nov. 2 (AP).—Lawrence B. Simpson, American seaman under three-year sentence to a German prison for sedition, today petitioned the ministry of justice to pardon him and send him home.

Simpson said he did not realize the extent to which he interfered with politics in another country, stated he was sorry, and asked to be permitted to leave the country.

Simpson, after spending 14 months in German concentration camps, was tried in September and given the three-year term, minus the time he already had served.

Triple Funeral For Crash Victims

Danville, Va., Nov. 2.—A triple funeral will be held here tomorrow when Charles H. Hudson, his wife, Mrs. Nannie Hudson, and their granddaughter, Jean McKinney, are buried here. All were killed near here Saturday when their sedan and a trailer truck belonging to Nolan Mabes, of Leaksville, N. C., and driven by Thomas Jones, collided.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson's three daughters, also in the car, were in a serious condition at Memorial Hospital today. All have fractured skulls and broken bones. Mrs. R. H. McKinney, mother of the infant, and Miss Nannie Hudson may not survive, but slight improvement has been noted in the condition of Miss Edna Hudson, 13.
